Foreword

"Fond memory paints the scenes of other years,
Green by their memory still."

WE cannot live forever in the happiness of college days and in dreams of the life to come, for we must pass from this wholesome community of friendship into the great field of endeavor and accomplishment. It has been the purpose of the 1928 HOWLER Staff to record on the pages of this book, in a manner worthy of our Alma Mater, her progress during the college year 1927-28, to put into these pages something of the spirit of Wake Forest, to strengthen the bond of fellowship among Wake Forest's sons and thereby strengthen the ties which bind us to Wake Forest, to crystallize the pleasures of college life, to keep alive the precious memories and intimate friendships of our college days; this has been our trust. We present our attempt at its fulfillment.

Dedication

WASHINGTON MANLY WINGATE,
A.M., D.D., born in Darlington County,
S. C., July 28, 1828; Bachelor of Arts, Wake
Forest College, 1849; Master of Arts, ibid., 1854;
Doctor of Divinity, Columbian College, 1865;
Agent of Wake Forest College, 1852-1854; President of Wake Forest College, 1854-1879; died,
February 27, 1879. Age 50 years.

To the sacred memory of his unselfish love, his tireless devotion, and his unsurpassed sacrifice for Wake Forest College, we, the Staff of 1928, respectfully dedicate this, the twenty-sixth Volume of the HOWLER.

Date Lilia

He was an admirable college president.—Pritchard.

The power of his godly life made a very deep impression on all the students. Every one loved and admired him.—Mills.

. . . the man whose presence always charmed me; whose genius fired me; whose spirit with its guilelessness both rebuked and instructed me; whose gentleness tamed me; whose affection unmaimed me.—Skinner.

He was as unsuspecting and guileless as a child.—McDowell.

He was always bright and cheerful, full of wit and humor. Many declared that he was the most interesting and charming man they had ever met.—Mills.

He was the best man I ever knew. He was freer from vanity, self-ism, envy, pride, and malice than any man I ever knew. I never saw him that my heart was not glad, and never parted from him without sorrow.—Skinner.

I cannot now think of his genius, his transcendent and almost unrivaled powers of analysis, but what I am lost in that power of powers which I have never seen in any other man to the same extent—the power of reaching conclusions through mists and fogs of pros and cons, and of acting upon them when reached with full assurance of their correctness. And how often have I left his presence, feeling that if I had his quiet, self-possessed spirit, I would give all I had. . . . How I felt that his calmness was but the evidence of a self-mastery which no other man of my acquaintance possessed. For there were deep volcanic fires burning in his soul, too, which he knew how to repress.—Dr. W. B. Royall.

He was the best preacher I ever heard.—Hufham.

The majestic march of his thought.—Dr. W. B. Royall.

The ablest preacher the Baptists of North Carolina have yet had and the sweetest saint the writer has yet known.—Pritchard.

I have heard him often in his happiest moods, when, for days and even weeks together, he seemed so imbued with the gospel that whenever he opened his mouth gracious words flowed from his lips as from a full fountain. . . . The themes he delighted most to discuss were the love and mercy of God.—McDowell.

He had analysis, vocabulary, imagination, and heart power.—Potcat.

The greatest man we had among us. For twenty-five years he was the central figure, the greatest power of the North Carolina Baptists.—Hufham.

His inward nearness to God was the fountain of all his greatness.—Skinner.

Like his divine master, he was meek and lowly in heart. I have seen him many times worried and troubled and in perplexity, but I never saw him manifest a fretful and impatient spirit or heard him utter a petulant or angry word. There was an absolute want of selfishness in his nature, and the heart of a little innocent babe is not more pure and sweet than was the spirit of this man of God. Never have I seen combined in any human being so much childlike simplicity of heart with such lofty powers of intellect. His trust in God seemed to be perfect and his spirit always devotional. Christ was literally formed in him, the hope of glory.

It was meet that such a life should be crowned by a beautiful and glorious death. His last day was the happiest of his life. All that day his face shone as did that of Moses when he came from the presence of the Lord on the mount, and when the supreme hour came, the glory of God overwhelmed the chamber where the good man met his fate. Just before he breathed his last he seemed conversing with his Saviour as though he were personally present: "Oh, how delightful it is. I knew you would be with me when the hour came, and I knew it would be sweet, but I didn't know it would be so sweet as it is!"—Pritchard.

The success which attended Dr. Wingate's agency for the College, from 1852-54, led its friends to hope that Wake Forest might become one of the outstanding colleges of the country. With its debts gone, or provided for, the one thing most needed was endowment. In securing this the youthful president took the lead. For this he prayed. He early matured his plans. The decisive day came at the Baptist State Convention of 1856, whose meetings were held in the hall of the House of Commons of the State Capitol. Our cut represents Wingate, after a night of prayer, in conference with C. W. Skinner and Richard Felton, of Edenton. A few minutes after this interview, Dr. Thomas E. Skinner, son of C. W. Skinner, came before the Convention, which was considering the matter of raising an unencumbered endowment of $50,000 for the College. Already, according to the record, "A feeling of deep and solemn interest and anxiety pervaded the entire body, as well as the crowd of spectators in the gallery. Like a suppressed subterranean fire it only needed an outlet to make itself seen as well as felt." At this juncture, Dr. Skinner announced gifts of $5,000 each for his father and Mr. Felton, to which he added $3,000. "The effect was magical." The desired endowment was raised and in the hands of the College Treasurer before the opening of the Civil War.

President

"Not in massive buildings, not in spacious grounds, not in huge endowments, but in the character and the performances of students who go into the world resides the permanent greatness of a college. Wake Forest is largely in the keeping of its students. We who remain salute those who go out to demonstrate by the quality of their lives the excellence which we believe is in this College."

WILLIAM LOUIS POTEAT, M.A., LL.D.
President Emeritus

"The great men of science are feeling today that a system of things out of which mind arose must itself be mental at bottom, that the order of the universe suggests an Infinite Intelligence, its beauty an Infinite Artist, its invisible ministries an Infinite Friend. They have done little beyond presenting examples of the miraculous, lifting the curtain on wonder. With a clearer and ampler radiance the heavens declare the glory of God, and the solid firmament of the Psalmist, dissolved now into the illimitable universe of stars, shows the divine handiwork with a new and overwhelming impressiveness."

DANIEL BUNYAN BRYAN, M.A., Ph.D.
Dean

The opening of each college year reminds me afresh, not only that hope springs eternal in the human breast but also that in youth is eternal hope itself. The satisfaction of multiplying friendship, of magnifying opportunity, of glorifying experience, and of rejoicing in achievement still characterize college life. I love it. We live this period not once alone, but over and over a thousand times and add its joys to the happiness of all remaining years.

"Class of twenty-eight, we salute you once more and bid you carry the name of Alma Mater sealed in your hearts as a covenant of abiding love."

When President Wingate handed the members of the Class of 1861 their diplomas all who were not preachers of the Gospel left Wake Forest almost with gun on shoulder. During the months of March, April and May 1861, the excitement that was stirring the country was also intense at the College. As Professor Mills said: "Madness and anger ran away with the mind." The young men were eager to be away and in the war. Accordingly, the Commencement was put a full month earlier than usual. Among those from the Graduating Class who went were Luther Rice Mills, later Professor of Mathematics and Bursar in Wake Forest College; William Bailey Royall, who for sixty-two years has been our distinguished and beloved Professor of Greek; and Thomas Fentress Toon, later Superintendent of Public Instruction of North Carolina. They were at the time hardly more than lads, but in the war they showed themselves men, and in peace they showed themselves no less.

Senior Class Poem

I N the friendly strife of college life
The days have rolled by apace;
Pleasures known though hours flown
Hold us in their embrace.

But, as there's a gale for every sail
Upon the varied sea of life,
We go our way, though pleasant the stay
Here, sheltered from the strife.

As from these places we turn our faces;
Leaving haunts, studies, and friends,
We shall hope to meet in friendship sweet
Where duty and pleasure blends.

From each battle fought and victory wrought
There's strength for another fray,
And joy to come from work well done
At the close of life's short day.

Wake Forest, to you we bid fond adieu,
Enriched by your stores of treasure,
We'll have paid our toll at a worthy goal
In our Alma Mater's measure.

POET.

"Ned"

Activities: Davidson County Club; Mary Hill College Club; Volunteer Band (3, 4); Assistant in Chemistry (3); Assistant in Math (4); Principal State High School (24); Head of Department of Science, Campbell College (24-27).

Last year we sent Nelson out into the world as a graduate of the Class of '27; but he did not surprise us by coming back this year as an instructor in Biology and as a candidate for the Master's degree. His insatiable desire for knowledge keeps him in the pursuit of learning. This son of Wake Forest has already succeeded, but the future holds for him a still higher and nobler success to be achieved.

MARGARET ELIZABETH LINBERRY

Applicant for M.A. Science Degree

Raleigh, N. C.

Activities: A.B. from Meredith ('26); Member of Faculty of Raleigh Public Schools ('26, '27).

Margaret is known on the campus as "Our Co-ed" but she has strictly shown to her classmates her desire for an education. She was the first lady to matriculate at this institution under the new regulation made by the board of Trustees last summer—which heretofore had not allowed any girls to register. Margaret received her B.A. Degree from Meredith with the class of '26, finishing there with high honors, ranking among the leaders of the class in scholarship and gaining a widespread popularity among the students and professors. Margaret in conscientious, frank in her statements, diligent as a student, and performs her duties faithfully. Whatever she does, is done in a whole-hearted way, and she has always found time to make friends. Due to her earnestness, congeniality and big-heartedness, we are sure she will make a splendid physician and prove an honor to her profession. Margaret being the first girl to enter Wake Forest Medical School, we are expecting to hear great things from her.

Activities: William Edgar Marshal Medical Society; Euzhan Literary Society; Pan H'leni Council ('27).

"Jim" is a hard working and conscientious fellow. He has a heart full of human understanding. He has the ability of consoling those in trouble, and giving strength to those who are weak. The medical profession will be greatly benefited and helped when this young fellow enters the ranks of that noble profession. Some day we predict that his Alma Mater will number "Jim" among her sons who have accomplished noteworthy services for humanity.

Ashley is a man of real worth. He is the most diligent and consistent of men here; excelling as a student and a forensic warrior. He has won an enviable place among both the students and faculty as a sincere, friendly, clear-cut, firm, and scholarly Christian gentleman. A man with the courage of his convictions and with the ability to act and that quickly. He always has a new idea, and when expressed is tempered with wisdom and sparkling with wit. His sterling qualities, his sunny and unselfish disposition will help make the world a better place in which to live.

Activities: Philomathean Literary Society (1, 2, 3); Philosophy Club; Phi Debator's Medal (1); Vice President Medical Society (5); William Edgar Marshall Medical Society (4, 5); Internae College Hospital (5); Biology Assistant (3).

"Sunny" is his nickname, and rightly called so, because he has been a student of high scholarship and ambitions during his college career. His policy is: "Smile, and the world smiles with you," and "Sunny" surely meets the world with a care-free attitude, making friends all the way. He became interested in science and decided to associate with the dead in preparation for the associations with the ailments of the living. Besides doing his best in the medical school, we find him very friendly with the ladies. May this friend "with the smile" ever bring happiness to the afflicted and be a success in his profession in the fullest expression of the term.

"Sleepy"

Activities: Pan Hellenic Council; Licensed Attorney.

"Sleepy's" leaving us is our only sorrow of graduation. His classmates will anxiously await reunions when reminiscences will be an endless joy. And we, still here, will wonder what powerful personality is lacking in our midst. "Sleepy" appears rather unassuming and nonchalant to those who may not intimately know him. We, who have lived with him, vouch for the unlimited potentialities within his level head. And some day, we are sure, the lawyers of our State will hold him up as a model whom we all should hope to imitate.

Erwin is one of those fellows possessed with the kindly attributes of nature. His integrity of character, charm of personality, and sincere application in his chosen field of life's work have endeared him to his fellow students and friends to the extent that time will not suffice to obliterate. Under the cloak of his reserve and dignity there breathes a kind and sincere heart, expressive in stalwart actions and high ideals. Other than an all-round good fellow and student, he was an outstanding member of our baseball team for two years. We wish for him the best in life and success in his chosen profession.

"J. Irvin" hails from Lumberton, a wide-awake town, where boys are boys and men are real men. His quiet unassuming ways have won for him the hearts of many a friend. He goes about his work with much eagerness and a determination that says, "Never give up." He has a magnetic power about him that after once you have learned him, he's your friend thereafter. Due to this fact, he is liked by all the students on the campus. His ever ready smile and sterling character was always missed while he was away on the Glee Club trips. Irvin assisted Dr. Bradbury in Biology and came through with much success. His fondness for science has caused him to change his mind from the ministerial class to the medical profession.

"The most precious gem is often wrapped in the smallest package." This old adage is surely true in Binkley's case. His record at Wake Forest has been a commendable one in every respect. From the day he entered college, he has been a leader in his classes, and in the activities on the campus. His untiring efforts have surely been rewarded in every possible way. His clean life, his cheerful disposition, and his love for his studies make him an example to be followed by those who have high ideals. Of him we can say: "Student, Scholar, Friend, and Christian Gentleman."

Activities: Varsity Football (1, 2); Phi-Kappa Literary Society (1, 2); Masonic Club.

Here is a man whose broad face, heavy stature, and muscular figure is an object of admiration for admirers of many forms. But those who know him know that the uniformity and solidity of his protoplasmic make-up is only a reproduction of his stability of character. Stacie cast his intellectual lot with the freshmen class here in the autumn of 1923. That fall, besides his intellectual activities, he played guard on the Deacon Reserves, whose goal line was never crossed. As a Sophomore, he was a Demon on that Deacon State Championship aggregation. After being out two years as an Educational Administrator he now graduates with the class of '28 and Wake Forest gives the world a man who is fitted to live as well as to succeed.

Bowers came to us two years ago. During his stay at Wake Forest he has made many friends. His interest in athletics and his devotion to his studies has been that of the highest type. He is truly a "clean sport" and believes in playing the game fair whether on the athletic field or in the classroom. We are confident that as he leaves this place and goes forth to face the battle of life, he will carry with him this same untiring effort, and that through this earnest effort good will be accomplished.

Activities: Track (1, 2); Class Basketball (2); William Edgar Marshal Medical Society; Euzelian Literary Society; President Medical Class.

Quiet and reserved, yet possessing a dynamic personality—this is "Brick." His large number of friends are ready proof of his genuine character and straightforwardness. Aside from this, he is a student "par excellence," as is shown by his enviable scholastic record. As president of the "Medicos" this year "Brick" has, with no mean skill, led his fellow-classmen triumphantly through the labyrinth of anatomy, bacteriology, pathology and other subjects, and emerged with them in a blaze of glory. "Brick," we know success is yours; the best of luck to you.

"Amen," as he is known by his many friends, is one of the most popular and best known members of the class of '28. He holds the high position of president of the Law Class. In scholarship he stands among the highest in his class, and has only been in school three and a half years to graduate. He is broad in his political astuteness, and sagacity has made him known as the "Mark Hanna" of Wake Forest student politics. Endowed with a personality that wins friends and being one of those dependable fellows who make their word as good as their bond, his success is assured in his chosen profession of law. We are expecting him soon to be one of the leaders of the North Carolina bar.

To all the students Van is as well known as any one, and for every one he has a smile and a friendly word. To his associates he contributes his part of life's joys. This is he: faithful to all things, can be truest beyond dispute, and always works diligently that he may attain his noble ideals. In Christian work no one is more sincere, and with the greatest joy he takes upon himself the Master's Business. His ideals are the noblest, aspirations the highest, and perseverance beyond measure. Wherever he may make his abode, he will make for himself a place in the hearts of those with whom he comes in contact. In return for their love he will give the highest, noblest, and best.

ANDREW CARNEGIE CARTER

Behold a real man. Carnegie thinks deeply. He is a man never hasty in his judgment, and who possesses the quiet courage to live for his convictions. His ideals are high. The ability to choose the proper sort of friends, and to be a real friend, makes him outstanding in this respect. He is a student par excellence. With his strong leaning toward higher finance, he should do well. Our Alma Mater will some day have just cause to point with pride to this sturdy son from the "Land of the Sky."

Casper comes to us from Wingate Junior College. He is very fond of his work and, especially, his mathematics. He has a strong mind which is noticed by every one who meets him on the campus. Casper is not only sincere in his work, but he is sincere in his friendships and he is a friend to every one he meets. He doesn't have to put forth much effort to smile when he meets you because that is a part of his personality. There is no doubt that he will make good in life because such ability with sincerity and honesty spells success.

Activities: Freshman Football, Basketball, and Baseball (1); Varsity Football (1, 2, 3, 4); Varsity Baseball (1, 2, 3, 4); Captain Freshman Baseball Team.

Joe came to us after preparing three years at Oak Ridge, where he established an enviable record as an athlete. While here he has surpassed his previous record in Baseball and Football, being unanimously chosen All-State shortstop for each year he has played, as well as being mentioned All-State end on the gridiron. Joe begins his professional baseball career this year with the Chattanooga Club of the Southern League, and intends to enter the coaching field later, probably after his venture on the sea of matrimony, as is predicted by his close friends. Possessing a good personality and a clean, straightforward manner he has made many friends who wish him nothing but the best the world has. Joe deserves it.

Literary? Well I should say so—one possible scholar from the Class of '28. Were it not for his record as a debater, I should say Elmer is to be seen and read, but not heard. Modest and unassuming, thoughtful and quiet as he is, one finds in him a rich vein of wit and humor. Candidly refreshing, too, is his keen sense of the aesthetic. His opinions are worth the getting, even if one is forced to translate them into ordinary English. One of his favorite terms fits him—he is the quintessence of amicableness, a fit companion for poets.

Cope is accurate in his work and while at it he is very serious, but there are times when he would rather be with one of the fairer sex. He has won the hearts of many, and is liked by all on the campus. During an athletic contest you will often hear his shrill voice backing up the team. Knowing his ability as a Mathematician, we feel sure he will become a great instructor of the youth. Much luck to you, Charles.

"Sprock" began his notable career at Wake Forest in 1921 and has been affiliated with the college in numerous ways ever since. As we approach the close of another year we find him on the threshold which will soon mark his entrance into the medical profession. "Sprock" has climbed to higher peaks than perhaps anyone in our class. From a Freshman in '21 to a full time instructor of Chemistry in '25 he has ably and materially enriched the college. For two years he was instructing the minds of undergraduates. And now from his lofty, dignified position of "professor" he again assumes the role of a private among his fellow sufferers under the persecutions of the medical faculty. His congenial, sociable manner, his all-round ability, and, in fact, his whole personality are indicative of that success toward which each of us strives.

"Dick" comes to us from Shelby, N. C. He chose as his profession the field of medicine; however, prior to his period of seclusion, as all medical students have, he made a host of friends and by his personality has held them all. Envious is "Dick's" record in the Medical School, and we predict a more enviable record when he starts to play the role of "Dr. Painkiller." "Dick" is a boy that anybody can depend on and no truer friend can be found on the campus. We hate to have him leave us, but other yet unknown friends are waiting for him.

During "Russ's" prolonged stay at Wake Forest he has proved the fallacy of the theory that studies and social activities do not mix. Despite the proverbial grind of study required of embryonic "Medicos" "Russ" has always found time to cultivate friendships on the campus here, there, and everywhere—in fact his friends are limited only by acquaintances, and his acquaintances are numerous. Behind his seeming care-free disposition, there is a marked reserve of manner, a character of merit, and a distinct sincerity of purpose, filled with plenty of optimism and hope for successful accomplishment as a "peddler of pills" and adept wielder of the surgeon's knife.

The joys of graduation are dimmed when we think of parting with such fellows as "Shock." Although somewhat indifferent toward acquiring a host of friends, he is admired by all of his associates, not only for his unique personality, but because he has shown himself to be a man of the highest character. His friendly attitude goes far to assure him a bright future, and that he will be a real physician, as well as an honor to his profession.

Only those who are most closely associated with Rawdon can fully appreciate his true value. A casual friend could hardly guess his best qualities, because they are too deeply grounded to be detected immediately. His calmness and self-possession on all occasions are traits we all admire—these he has. He doesn't know anything bad about any one, or if he does, he keeps it to himself. He doesn't know what an enemy is. He is a friend to all, especially to the girls, and we believe he has a girl in every town. We predict for Rawdon much success in his future work.

"Gay"

Activities: Special Gym Team (2, 3, 4); Captain (4); Northampton County Club; Fizzellian Literary Society; Member of College Band (4).

Just four years ago this young man began his career at Wake Forest and surely many of us are envious of some of his unusual qualities. If he has two faces, he only wears one; if he dislikes one, he never tells the public; if he knows one's faults, he never criticizes that one; if he hates one, no one knows of it; if he dislikes other people's methods, he uses his own; and if he is in love, the girl has difficulty in finding it out. Surely Northampton never produced a more refined, more courteous, more polite, more friendly, better disposed and finer gentleman than Gay. Even though Wake Forest as a whole cannot fail to miss his pleasing disposition, friendly smile, his words of cheer to every one, and his unusual abilities in music, chemistry, and gymnastics, it cannot but predict for this man a notable success.

Activities: Assistant Manager Baseball (2); Assistant Manager Track (3); Manager Track (4); Vice President Sophomore Class (2); Assistant Business Manager HOWLER (3).

Charles Parson Gaylor hails from Magnolia, N. C., down in the southeastern section of the State. "Charlie," as he is called by his friends and associates, may be described as being a young man made up of trustworthiness, perseverance, and "stickability." He is gifted with a winning personality which has brought him many friends throughout his life. Polite, friendly, and congenial, he goes about the campus speaking to all.

As well as being a lion among the ladies "Charlie" is a good and sturdy student. We hate to see him leave Wake Forest, but the best of friends must part; so in parting we predict and sincerely wish the very best of luck for him in his chosen profession—the greatest of all professions—that of the Law.

WALTER S. GUMBOR

Activities: Class Baseball (1, 2); Special Gun Team (3, 4); Track (4); Sub-Assistant Manager Football (2); Special columnist Old Gold and Black (1, 2); Freshman Intercollegiate Debate (4).

Although "Preacher" has to concede an advantage in weight and size to almost any other member of the graduating class, there is no necessity of his making a concession in any other respect. He has won the friendship of every one with his ever-present smile (or grin), his constant good humor, and—beneath it all—a reserve of sincerity and real worth. To most of us his future is an unknown X, but his stay here among us assures those who know him that this X, when it is known, will be as successful as he himself is liked and respected by his fellow-men here at Wake.

"Shorty" is a man of the highest type. Those who know him intimately will testify to this. "Co-ed"

Margaret is so vivacious and charming that you'd never suspect the undaunted, pioneer spirit that is hers, nor would you guess from her unassuming manner that she has the distinction of being the youngest woman attorney in the U. S. She is also the first woman to have the LL.B. degree conferred upon her by Wake Forest College. In the pursuance of this much coveted honor she has been forced to attend classes in three institutions: Wake Forest, N. C. C. W., Duke U. During the two years that W. F. C. claimed her she was the only Co-ed enrolled. At each college she attended a host of friends attest her popularity among both men and women. "The Co-ed" will always be loved and great success should be hers.

Activities: Philomathean Literary Society (1, 2, 3, 4); Assistant Supervisor Philomathean Literary Society (4).

"P. Y.'s" success as a student has not come to him as the result of great displays of brilliance, but is due to more permanent qualities—persistent application and effort. His friendships are of the same quality, having a solid growth from thorough acquaintance. In activities, the Philomathean Literary Society has never mothered a more sincere son and officer. We have marked the patient earnestness that has characterized his work in debate and oratory and do not see in him another Patrick Henry, but his way leads directly toward the field of service, and he will be worthy of his hire.

"Charlie" is one of those rare collegians who can combine the qualities of good fellowship and studiousness with an enviable degree of success. Bill is one of the most congenial members of the medical class. He is a pal to be appreciated and admired—his chief hobby being "more ladies." He is sincere, honest, upright, and friendly. As a student, he ranks with the best. His unswerving loyalty to his work as a student foretells his usefulness in his chosen profession. His presence on the campus will be greatly missed but we must be consoled by the fact that the loss to the college will result in immeasurable profit to humanity at large. We give him this "send-off": Bill, roll a pill, Roll 'em.

He is congenial, likeable, friendly, sincere, upright and studious. He is held in high esteem by both faculty and students, and the report comes to our campus that he is no less esteemed in "feminine circles." As a matter of fact he has had very prominent mention for the position of "All-American Skeek of the Feminine World" a place made vacant by the untimely death of Valentino. We're for you Bill, in all your endeavors, and your Alma Mater smiles upon you and rejoices to call you her son.

In personality, disposition, and ability, "B. T." possesses the prerequisites that make for prominence and achievement on any college campus. Henderson is dependable, clean-cut, and a man who can and will assume responsibility; and he has the persistence and tenacity of purpose that put things through rightly. The Republican Party finds a loyal and crusading spirit in this energetic and vigorous man, and we predict that his strength of character and well-set ideals will put him in the ranks of the few who move things and do things in the country. "B. T.'s" social propensity makes him at home among the ladies, and it is rumored that one fair lady has come to be the star of our fellow-student's future.

Henry is a representative of an apparently rapidly disappearing type of man in the modern college, viz.: the careful, conscientious and appreciative scholar. He has the rare ability to make himself a master of any subject whatever and to use this acquired mastery for further development along lines of intellectual activity. So strong is this urge of knowledge upon him that he determined to devote his talents to the great cause of Southern education. He will begin in a high school, but a man of his superior attainments will not stop until he is duly installed in a college or university seat. Henry is a mature student, is married and has a son, who, it is to be hoped, will be "a chip off the old block."

Not greatly different from his fellows, being endowed with strength of character, seriousness of purpose, ambition and marked ability. His candid and frank manner is his distinguishing characteristic. He despises the artificiality of man and nature and he would "strip clean" to get at the truth and genuineness of a thing. Ed, as he is known among the students, is taking his second degree here this year, and during the five years here he has grown into the friendship and admiration of every student. He believes in getting all the real joy possible out of life, and his favorite slogan is: "Keep hawking the jack." We predict for him a full measure of happiness and success in his profession.

Possibly the best reason why we like George is—just because we like him—we find no fault in him. That is not saying that we agree with everything that he says or does, but that back of every attitude that he takes is to be found a worthy viewpoint and admirable motive. We regret that he has been with the class only two years, but these two years with us have shown his mettle as a student, Christian, and friend. Here, winsome ladies, is an apt and willing pupil. If one sees Holliday he sees his smile; when he sees the smile he sees why his fame as a lover has made its burning way even to far-off France. But in spite of this heart hunger, almost a mania, for the fairest things in life, Holliday finds time to study and to be a friend. He has so blended study and friendship that it is difficult to tell in which he is most proficient, but he has both in the quantities that it takes to make a real laborer in the ranks of his fellowmen. So long, O' Scout—may we meet again!

Poets may be born, but true success is achieved. And if it is achieved by honest and consistent work towards a great ideal, Hopkins can never fail. With seriousness of purpose and honesty of motive he climbs though the rocks he rugged towards a most worthy goal. His excellent college grades, his various campus activities, and his many student friends, tell us that his efforts have been successful. In Hopkins there is the combination of a trained mind, large soul, pure heart, and strong body. Love for truth is his leading characteristic. Truly he will be a great teacher.

The admirable character is built of Truth, Right, Honesty, and hard work. This sterling character is found in "Gene" and has won for him the admiration of all who have known him. Let the following words of Tennyson speak to us for "Gene":

Only that which made us mean' us to be mightier by and by,

Set the sphere of all the boundless heavens within the human eye.

Sent the shadow of Himself, the boundless, thro' the human soul;

Boundless inward in the atom, boundless outward in the whole.

There is room at the top for the truly great, and we predict for "Gene" a place there.

Every one admires a worker; that is one reason why "Les" is admired by all who know him. His college career has been one of varied and excellent work. Honesty, frankness, affability, and persistence are his distinguishing characteristics; combine these with a winning personality and an accommodating nature—we can readily see an honorable and successful future for him. Whatever "Les" attempts will be crowned with success, for his make-up is not of the ingredients which cause failure.

"Jack," a son of the soil, whose native home is in the county of Vance. He possesses a sympathetic attitude towards the unfortunate—a trait of the Galilean whose call he has answered. He is a stalwart opponent of sin, and by persuasive argument we think he will win. "Lonsburg" was the one word "Jack" sent ringing through the air to passing motorists on week-ends, i. e. until the second day of January, 1927. On this day cupid shot his arrow true and "Jack" fell fatally wounded. After this incident the "nurse" nourished his physical body with proper vitamins well prepared. He has our best wishes for a successful ministry.

Activities: David-son County Club; Ministerial Class; Euzelian Literary Society; Vice President Union "G" B Y P. U.; Chaplain Euzelian Literary Society.

The waving grain fields of Davidson County are the home of our friend "John." His efforts to secure an education have been those of determination, courage, and patience. During one of his years away from college "John" had a little love affair. Results: A wife, who encourages him in his struggle upward; and a stickability will power to attain his life's goal—graduation from Wake Forest College. His reward should be a field of country churches, where, as shepherd of his flock he will give his life in service for Him who gave Himself for us. May he and his family enjoy the fruits of a hard earned victory for many years.

A. GLENDON JOHNSON
Applicant for LL.B. Degree

Johnson is primarily interested in the learning of the Law, but he finds time to equip himself with an extensive and elaborately developed minor course. Of this latter course no textbook has been written, nor are selected cases helpful. When a worthwhile book is written, it will be called: "A Short-Cut to Matrimony by Infallible Means." Then, too, Johnson has shown himself interested in various branches of academic training that tend to make a man master of situations other than those met in purely legal circles. Outside of the classroom he has shown himself friendly, deserving the friendship that is his.

Here is a man among men. He has a noble, stalwart, Christian character, and a personality which somehow through its air of manly attraction has drawn up around him a large circle of friends composed of members of the faculty and the student body. "Lamm" is one of the few preachers in North Carolina who has so lived the Golden Rule that he now holds the pastorate of his home church of which he has been a member since his early childhood.

Arthur is one of the outstanding students at Wake Forest. In his class work, as well as on the tennis courts, he has distinguished himself. His opinion and ability are respected by every one. He glories in his studies and seldom fails to cop a "100" on examination. He boasts of the friends he has made in college and no one prizes their friendship more highly than he. If the future can be judged by the past, it is easy to predict that he is going to be a great success.

"H. J." is an idealist, a strong aspirant toward things that are really worthwhile. Men find him accommodating, resourceful, energetic and thoroughly capable, and a man to whom men go when they want someone who will assume responsibility. This neophyte litterateur has been favored by the gods with a poet's soul and a lyricist's spirit, and his work in prose stands highly commendable. His rollicking laughter and genial disposition make him companionable and truly friendly. Sincere in his convictions and outspokenly honest in the expression of them, he is a man worth knowing, and his philosophy of life is one to be admired and desired.

Bob is a man of wise judgment mingled with a keen sense of humor. He has taken an active part in college affairs and is known and admired by the entire student body and faculty. On the basketball court he is known as an unusually good guard not only at Wake Forest but throughout the State. Bob is both a ladies' man and a student—an unusual combination. He finished his work for his "sheepskin" in only three years and has started out to be a doctor. Bob has a way—a nice way—of accomplishing the things that he desires, and we feel sure he will get his M.D. as soon as time permits. Bob is a gentleman in the truest sense, a good mixer, a hard worker and a winner. We feel sure that he will be an honor to his chosen profession and an asset to the community in which he settles.

A man familiar with all the walks of life, well read, good student, and above all, a friend whom all should cherish, for without close contact with this man one cannot really appreciate the real personality which is held in reserve. An instructor of the youth in his home town has been his calling this year, after having completed sufficient work in summer school last year for his degree. History and Government were his hobby during his "Rah Rah" days, but we've a notion that the business world will eventually land him. You'll never guess the derivation of his nickname.

"Good nature and good sense ever join" and "E. C." is a man with these sterling qualities. He can not over-estimate college life for through his outspoken, congenial ways he has won the hearts of his college associates. Among the students he is one of the best. This is proved by the fact that although he was called from his study a year, he is graduating with his class. His most outstanding qualities are his seriousness of purpose and his determination to win. He is planning to continue his study, and we predict for him the brightest future.

"To do as might besseem an honest cavalier" has ever been the policy of our conscientious and admirable friend. Few men possess in as great measure as Peede the qualities that mark one as an upright gentleman. If devotion to duty and burning "midnight oil" will make one famous, he is already carving his name high on the roll of honor. His activities are influenced more by duty than by pleasure. Our pride and confidence in him cause us to predict for him a brilliant future.

"C. M." one of our number who has completed his college activities in three years including summer work, has been greatly missed on the campus this year. However, we are glad to hear that he is already making his mark at Louisville and that every noble trait of character and personality that was his while at Wake Forest has been bearing fruit in his work at the Seminary. Whatever may be the task, however difficult, or at whatever hour of the day or night he is called upon, he is willing and ready to help his fellow students, the college, or those in Wake Forest and elsewhere. His cheerful, cordial, and congenial manner cannot be forgotten in the minds of his fellow students. And his capable and candid opinions are constructive and commendable.

"Ot" in coming to us from Campbell College, where he left many friends, has proved himself an athlete, a student, and a gentleman. These three characteristics, perhaps, best describe "Ot" as he is known to us on the campus. Not flashy or spectacular by any means but the same earnest student and good fellow day in and day out. His departure from Wake Forest will be regretted by his many friends who, at the same time, predict a bright future for him in the world of business.

There are very few men on a college campus who do not know a star athlete, and "Phoebé" is no exception to the rule. He was the luminary of the Wake Forest line the past season, and had the honor of being picked on the mythical all-state football team. He is also one of the best baseball players at the receiving station in North Carolina collegiate baseball. His fighting on the gridiron, and the diamond, has been in a clean, sportsmanslike manner. His athletic record coupled with his unflinching friendship for his fellow-students, has made him one of the outstanding men of his class.

"Pheelps" is a man with a past. But it is a past that any of us would feel proud of. He took his Bachelor's degree here in the spring of 1922, after having served a year in France with the Aviation Corps during the World War. Upon his return from France, he married. Then he went into the automobile business in which he made, what the average college graduate would consider a marked success—but not Phillips. He returned to us last year looking for new worlds to conquer, and, like the true soldier that he is, he has made one of the most brilliant records of any man in the Medical Class of '28. He is a good student, a keen business man, a worthy friend, a true husband, and a Christian gentleman.

If the class of '28 be considered one great chain of steel, surely Rodney's link will be one of the last which will break. In Rodney one not only finds the well-refined gentlemanly manners which become a senior, but also some unusual characteristics which few possess. His appreciation of a good joke; his ability as a student, his "above-par" disposition, his sympathetic attitude toward those less fortunate than he, his unusual personality, and even the high esteem in which he is held by the ladies is not to be found at every corner. Surely these traits, backed by a good moral character, cannot help but bring this man success; and his many friends and classmates await with anxious hearts his progress in this world of ups and downs.

He elaborates extensively on the "Rule in Shelley's Case," the "Donkey Case," and the "Rule Against Perpetuities." In fact, he makes a specialty in "The Rule of the Last Clear Chance" and its relation to Domestic Relations and self-preservation. Could Richmond have had his desire; he would have been born in Ancient Greece where his hero worship could have found a worthy object in the Marathon. Having been born too late for this, however, he has stood solidly behind some great teams on Gore Field. His interest is not confined to athletics. He is just as prominent in the classroom and on the campus. He is scholarly, athletic and friendly. With all these deficiencies and efficiencies it is not strange that he is well liked as a companion and friend.

Activities: Gym. Team (3, 4); Golf Club (4).

"A good companion and a firm friend," "Jeff" being one of the smallest members of the class, entered through a small opening, the key-hole, but in exploration of the great field of science. "Jeff" is one of those congenial, sturdy, amiable companions with a free heart and accommodating nature. He is of the type of "hail fellow, well met," that one naturally likes, not for any special reason, but principally because he is always "one of the gang." During his stay here he has made numerous friends through his high scholarship and good sportsmanship, and as he enters into the realm of his chosen profession of medicine we wish for him the best of luck, and know that great success awaits him.

Joe is the type of man that the college needs in order to make the finished product of a gentleman. He came to Wake Forest with the purpose and determination that has won him a place in the hearts of all those who know him. To his fellow students, to the faculty, and to the community, he has been very much devoted in every way. He has not neglected the intellectual, physical or spiritual side of his life. He has only those ideals and morals that are found in a servant and upbuilder of mankind. He has a pleasing personality, and an extremely accommodating spirit, and an unusual character that has not been marred by any of the habits of the modern day. Joe has qualities that are backed by honesty and sincerity. Success is within his reach.

Activities: Licensed Attorney.

"Sandy" heard that knowledge was power. He evidently has gained both, having attended State, Carolina, Duke, Wake Forest and Davidson, or as Beck Neal says of him—"educated at the Big Five"—and with experiences that would fill volumes if written. He came to us first from State College in 1924 and remained a year and one summer session, rambling over a great part of the United States for three years and is now back with two purposes in view—to receive his law degree and license to practice. Possessing a good personality and a friendly manner, he has made a host of friends who look forward to the day when his favorite words, "I am a lawyer and I know the law!" will be a reality and not one of his many dreams.

"All along the journey of college life "Satt," as he is better known, has shown a high degree of executive ability. Naturally he has been honored by his fellows in many positions of trust and responsibility. He is unusually versatile in accomplishment, having taken an active interest in practically every phase of campus life. We who know him are sure that as he leaves Alma Mater's halls he will attain a worthy niche in the business world.

Harmory, N. C.

"Bernard"

Activities: William Edgar Marshall Medical Society (4, 5); Medical Librarian (5).

"Bernard" does not signify another great writer, but a man of corresponding success in the field of medicine. Bernard creates characters and his namesake hopes to repair them. Yet Shaw's chosen profession runs as a sort of unrecurrent that one forgets in the spare hours and rambles of campus life. It is then that we like him best—when the ready laugh and hearty good-fellowship weaves from mere acquaintance the magic fabric of friendship. No, "Bernard" is not a ladies' man—when there are no ladies present—but he has decided that it takes two to practice medicine successfully. His eyes stray from his books and in them is reflected leaping flames of a cozy fireplace.

"Hub"

Activities: Student Council (5); William Edgar Marshall Medical Society.

One might easily suppose that a "skeeter," summer school sessions, and living relatively close to one's home would act as an antibody to prevent one from accomplishing his task. Not so, however, with "Hub." In addition to his social assets, he has proved himself a man in those qualities necessary for success in medicine. In the short five years he has been in intimate contact with Wake Forest College and its various activities, he has been able to complete more than enough work for his Bachelor's degree in Medicine. Whether we meet him in class, in the dormitory, in the fraternity hall, or away from the campus, he carries with him the spirit of friendship. His agreeable personality, we are sure, will be the predominating factor in attaining his goal in whatever school he may attend or wherever he may practice after he has acquired his M.D.

Activities: Junior Critic Euzelian Literary Society (3); Secretary Night Section (4); General Secretary (4); Chief Marshal Anniversary Day (4); Assistant in Bible (4).

To know Sprinkle is to appreciate him. In fact, only through close association with him can one realize fully his sterling characteristics and his profound worth. He is very frank in expressing his views upon any important subject, but he never adheres to "housetop exclamations." Above all, Sprinkle is a thorough student—always mastering his subjects with an intellectual ease unknown to the majority of college students. Nothing less than a remarkable success can be predicted for this noble lad from the "foot-hills," because his thoroughness here leads us to believe that he will be master of whatever field he may choose.

 "Ed" "Stud"

Activities: Football (1, 2, 3, 4); Baseball (1, 2, 3, 4).

During his four years at Wake Forest, Ed has made for himself an enviable record, both as a student and as an athlete. He is a student possessing a keen intellect. His physical make-up is as perfect as a Grecian statue of an Olympian hero. Combined with these are personality and character to complete the constituency of a man four-square. Whether in the classroom or on the gridiron he always gives a good account of himself, and commands the highest admiration from his fellow students. We recommend Stallings to the world as one of the best men Wake Forest has to offer.

"Red" is one among those who entered on a par with the rest of us but has outstripped most of us in the race for completing our academic work. By taking advantage of the opportunities of summer school he has not only completed his college course, but during this year has creditably filled his place among his freshman brothers of anatomy. He has been active in several phases of college life as well as keeping pace with the leaders in scholarship. We have not known him as we wish we might have done this past year on account of his confining duties in the medical department. We know him well enough to want to know him better. And we hope that as time goes on we may come to know him as one outstanding in his profession. "A friend in need is a friend indeed," and this is the type of man "Red" is.

Readily acknowledged as among the best dressed men on the campus, "Abie" has juggled the heart of many a member of the contrary sex. "J. B." is most popular among the ladies, though we hope his success with the fairer sex will not interfere with his busyness in life among men. When you first know him you like him; he wears a smile and he is never "blue." His strong Christian character and the sum total of what he is, make him popular and loved by all who know him.

Activities: Football (1); Track (1, 2, 4); Dramatic Club (3, 4); Manager Football (4); Licensed Attorney (3).

Possessed with the enviable ability of converting acquaintances into friends, the rare quality of being himself at all times sincere and frank, a marked executive ability as evidenced by his superior managership of the Deacon warriors of the gridiron, and sincerity of purpose to rank high among the legal luminaries of the State—this is Leonard. Remember that he hails from the "city of seven wonders"—Kinston—and you can easily visualize this barrister of the future as the successor to old Justinian himself.

There are few among us who have not been favorably impressed and greatly benefited by Clyde's friendly and always cheerful attitude to his fellows. He has constantly manifested throughout his college course a decidedly unselfish and generous spirit. Such a contact has resulted in many friends. We have been impressed as well by the earnest endeavors that have characterized his years at Wake Forest. We wish for him the truest success in his field, knowing that the rewards of such a college career must follow him in these later years.

"Bob," the man in whose veins flows the blood of a proud aristocratic family, is to all who know him, a friend. His friendly smile is a joy to all who come in contact with him; his persistence and ability have won for him a thorough understanding of the Law, and because of his ability, faithfulness, and sincerity, he is destined to be a leader in his chosen profession. Here is truly a modern Southern gentleman pushing upward to the highest rung of the ladder to success.

Activities: Camden County Club; William Edgar Marshall Medical Society; Assistant in Embryology and Histology.

There is no one in the student body that commands more respect and deserves more commendation than "H. W." We have found in the five years that we have been with him a real friend, an excellent student, and a favorite pal. "H. W." came to college to study for the ministry, but soon decided that he could be of greater service in the field of medicine. He has proved himself worthy of his choice, and stands as one of the best students of his class. Although stern and firm in his convictions, "H. W." is of a jovial nature and a witty disposition. He was chosen as assistant in Embryology and Histology in recognition of his efficiency and scholarship. We shall watch his inevitable success in the medical profession.

Senior Class History

IN the fall of 1924 the class of 1928, pulsating with the heightened anticipation of entering a new world and driven on by accentuated hopes, turned the shimmering nose of its verdantly gleaming craft, The Spirit of Inquiry, over the heaving Atlantic of achievement and toward the distant Europe of a college degree. Through the warm sunshine of beneficent junior-hood and senior-hood, the nerve-racking storms of the sophomore constituency, and the climatic vagaries of faculty judgment and observance, the virescent-hued craft has wended its way toward the landing field of graduation.

Within the range of memorabilia concerning the history of the class of '28 is the ubiquitous impression that this open-eyed aggregation of youth got when it reached the Wake Forest campus for the first time and found ditches running over the place with promiscuous freedom and the rain beating down with unremitting steadiness. But, in a very short while these neophytes of the intellectual world had caught some of the true spirit of the college and had found here an atmosphere that was distinctive and exemplified in its benefits and helpfulness.

Shortly after their advent into college the class elected its officers, choosing D. M. Clemmons as president; and, towards the close of the year, Miss Eloise Greenwood was elected sponsor of the class of '28. During this initial quarter of the academic career the football team of the class of '28 gained gridiron fame to the extent of winning the State Championship; gained basketball scintillation and baseball distinction. Also, six members of the class represented Wake Forest in Freshman intercollegiate debates with the University of North Carolina and Davidson College. When the mid-term examinations were imminent much was the trepidation, speculation and incoherence in the freshman ranks; a cataclysm seized the class of '28. But when spring came around the freshmen felt that they were legally sophisticates in the intellectual world; but any promulgation of this feeling was certain to disrupt the already precarious sophomore patronage. By the time June came around this heterogeneous group of freshmen who had entered college in the fall before was homogeneous in spirit and solid in sentiment toward Wake Forest College and was a definite entity of influence and concern.

Returning to college in the fall of 1925 the class, with G. N. Ashley elected as its president, again continued its record of achievement. A number of the sophomores made places on the football team and did credit to the college and to themselves. Several members of the class were chosen as members of the college Glee Club, in which year the club won the State championship among all the college glee clubs in the State except that of the University of North Carolina. One member of the class was chosen this year for membership in the Golden Bough.

It was during the sophomore year that the class was saddened by the death of one of its members, Leslie J. Humber. Miss Ruth Dunning was elected sponsor of the Sophomore class.

Another well remembered incident of the sophomore year was that of the entertainment of the Wake Forest sophomores by the sophomore class of Meredith. These classes were destined to repeat this most colorful and enjoyable occasion in their senior year.

Entering the junior year of its academic life the class elected O. K. Joyner to serve as chief pilot, with, as his crew, the following men: W. K. McDowell, vice president; R. E. Lee, Jr., secretary; W. C. Whitley, poet; T. J. Stephenson, historian.

During this third year the class had a number of its members to make places on the intercollegiate debating teams; many of its members made good records on the athletic field in all three major sports and in track, also. The Glee Club chose a large number of its members from the class of '28; and, again, the Golden Bough honored the juniors by choosing five of their members for membership in that honor group. Miss Virginia Gay was elected to the position of sponsor of the class.

The class of '28 passed out of its junior year with the departure of Dr. William Louis Poterat from the presidency of Wake Forest College. And, the class pays its highest and finest tribute to the great man under whose guidance it spent the first three years of its career.

With the coming of the senior year for the class of '28 came Dr. Francis Pendleton Gaines as the new president of Wake Forest College; and the class which holds the position of being the first class to graduate under the presidency of Dr. Gaines, has tried to live the Wake Forest spirit in honor of the new administration and for the glory of the college.

The seniors, sighting land in the hazy and hearteningly immediate distance, chose, to fill its gubernatorial position, R. E. Lee, Jr., who has made an able leader throughout the year. H. C. Hopkins was elected vice president; S. C. McDowell secretary; G. N. Ashley, testator; E. H. Kemp, prophet; Henry J. Overman, poet; Elmer Cloer, historian. O. T. Blinky was later elected to the position of class orator. Miss Nancy Rand was chosen as sponsor of the senior class.

During the last year quite a large number of the strong debaters were chosen from the class of 1928. Again, members of the class gained honors for themselves on the athletic field. The seniors had the distinct pleasure of entertaining the senior class of Meredith at Meredith. Also, the senior smoker, looked forward to with keen anticipation, was a rich fulfillment of the expectations of the seniors of a gloriously good time together. During the senior year the Wake Forest Band was organized, and several members of the class of '28 were in the musical body. During the senior year the Baptist Centennial Campaign was set in motion in the State, and a large number of Wake Forest seniors went over the State speaking in the interest of the Baptist colleges.

Within the ranks of the class of '28 there are lawyers who, it is not extravagant to say, will achieve heights comparable with those reached by the strongest in their respective field, and some will go further, probably. In the constituency of the class there are ministerial students that give promise of rising to true greatness and becoming powerful figures in their field. The Medical class has claimed quite a large number of the men in our class, and the class thus gives to the world some promising doctors. Others have chosen the field of teaching, some the field of Chemistry, some the field of Business, and others are as yet undecided as to what they will take up as their life's work. The history of achievement among men will tell the story of the class of '28 in the years that are still in the dressing room of the theatre of life.

The class of '28 bids its Alma Mater farewell.

Ever maintain your greatness, Wake Forest. May your sons of the future believe in you with a faith that is indestructible and a devotion that burns perennially. May you ever stand for and fight with unqualified sincerity and uncompromising purpose for the truth and justice. May the spirit of true scholarship permeate and pervade the atmosphere of thy halls; and may the richness of fine congeniality, true and manly friendship, high ideals, and a fine philosophy of life be had by the men of your campus. May the old college bell continue to peal forth the liquid notes of constancy to duty and the liberty from ignorance that may be gained within your class rooms and your library; and may the magnolias breathe forth the sweet scents of high thinking and clear strength. May every virtue, power, and influence that makes men broader in their scope of knowledge, greater men for their appreciation of the finest things of life, and better prepared men for the game of life—may all these be yours, Alma Mater.

HISTORIAN.

Senior Class Prophecy

PROPHETS are born, not elected. The very obvious truth of this statement has never been brought home to anyone more forcibly than it was to me on the memorable evening in December, 1927, when I tried in vain to tear the impenetrable veil of mystery which shields from our view the events, which are going to take place in the future. During Christmas Holidays I had consulted several old weather-prophets and one soothsayer, but the weather-prophets said that foretelling human destinies was even further beyond the extent of their powers than weather-forecasting, and the soothsayer had no "sooths" for me. I had returned to school on the thirty-first day of December and that night, as there seemed to be nothing else for us to do, several of us boys who had returned to school a day ahead of the scheduled time, put our heads together and made plans for a chicken fry. The small matter of getting the poultry gave us no worry at all because we knew that certain faculty members would be only too glad to contribute, provided that we should not wake them as we prowled around their poultry-houses. I chose the henery of Dr. Gorrell as the object of my nocturnal visitation, because I imagined that any man who worked as hard as he did would sleep soundly.

Exactly at midnight I was creeping silently by his barn, which I had to pass on my way to the henery. I was thinking about the writing of the prophecy, because the task lay heavy on my mind, and I remarked to myself, "I wish I had that prophecy written."

"Well, why don't you write it?" said a voice, a perfectly intelligible voice but one which somehow didn't seem human. After I had recovered from my fright, I investigated in the direction from which the voice had seemed to come, and was not especially surprised when I found the long ears and sleek neck of the species which is better known for braying than for uttering prophecies.

Then I remembered that in my boyhood I had heard old people say the power of speech is given to animals just at midnight on New Year's Eve. After some time I replied to his unexpected query, "I am neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet, and I can't see one day ahead of the present."

"Perhaps, then I can be of assistance to you," replied the beast, "I happen to be a lineal descendant of Balaam's ass, whose story you have written in the book that you call the Bible, but I don't guess you are very familiar with that Book—and I have the gift of prophecy."

"Speak then," said I, "tell me what is to be the destiny of the class of '28 and you will be rewarded with a salt brick."

He rolled his eyes back into his cranium and began:

"It's 1950.

"I see a father, with his son across his knee. It's Hamp Hopkins and there seem to be a number of other little culprits awaiting punishment at the hands of their irate parent.

"Across the street, I see a number of gentlemen seated on a front porch discussing politics. There is Reverend Joe Roach, who is taking hunch with Dr. W. C. Rivenbark. The other members of the group are Ot Person, the mayor of the town, and Henry Overman, the editor of the Weekly Creeper.

"Dan MacArthur rolls by in his new Rolls-Royce. He has married a rich widow, it seems. Ed Lee is his chauffeur. I see Rodney Piland look up with envy as he cranks his old 1912 model Ford.

"The scene changes to the business section of this town, Forestville, which now has a population of about 4,000. Zonie Ray is a prominent hardware dealer and John Sawyer is his head bookkeeper. Ed Stallings is sitting on a soap-box in front of the store, trying to hit a fly with tobacco-juice. George Montague, who is proudly wearing the badge of a deputy sheriff, has a warrant for Wade Matheny for operating his new wiener stand without license. Nig Lee is judge in the city court and he has just imposed a 30 day sentence on M. T. Lamm and Bruce Ousley for possessing liquor. They are about to be set free because they have disclosed the fact that they obtained the liquor from George Hocutt who, they say, manufactured it himself." When he said this, I began to suspect that he was an impostor, but I kept my peace and listened.

He continued: "I will now pass on to Raleigh, where several of the old boys may be found. Raleigh has never become a great city because it is too near Zebulon. Phoebe Phelps is a cop over there now; he succeeded Jim Padgett who was promoted to the position of Chief of Police. I see numerous firm names which look familiar: McBee & Morse, Attorneys-at-Law; J. C. Early, M.D.; and H. W. Wright, Chiropractor, are some of them. Numerous placards state that J. E. Cloer is going to give a lecture at the City Auditorium on the very timely question of 'Phototropism in the Echinoderms.'

"Now I see a new hospital, which has just been built by Jackson, Holliday & Keith, Architects, for Gardner & Homer. Fred Falls is about to perform a delicate operation on the brain of Sam Holbrook, who keeps trying to say something about 'stimulus' and 'response' as he gradually loses consciousness. Among those in the gallery, who have come to witness the operation, I see the new lady governor, Miss Ella Margaret Gordon, Judge C. M. Griffin, Rev. C. C. Holland, R. T. Henry and B. T. Henderson.

"There is a commotion in the street below. An officer is trying to get Carey Hedgpeh, who is now campaign manager for some woman politician, to stage his parade in some other section of town.

"Contrary to old traditions, I find only one drunk in the lobby of the Yarborough Hotel. That is O. T. Brinkley, and G. N. Ashley and Irwin Biggs are trying to keep him quiet, but he insists on singing. Crawford Bowers, house detective, has seen him, but he winks one eye and walks on. Bill Hatch is talking to a pretty waitress in the Coffee Shop next door.

"I find some of them in Washington, D. C. Here are Bill Hodges and A. C. Lawrence, Senators from the Old North State, and Charlie Gaylor, a member of the Presidential Cabinet. 'Preacher' Gilmore is leading the singing for a revival, which is being conducted by Rev. M. B. Cree. A. W. Peede is medical adviser to the President. Ed Herring is Superintendent of the Walter Reid Memorial Hospital. Paul Johnson, Brown Holoman, and Jack Harrell are surgeons there. L. J. Huntley owns a flying field out on the edge of town and R. E. Howard and S. L. Bowmen are air pilots and stunt flyers.

"I will now turn my attention to the rural districts around the capital city. Dr. W. A. Reid is making an analysis of some milk at the dairy of B. C. Steele. E. C. Pearce is one of Steele's helpers. He is milking cows over in the barn.

"Farther along the road I see Dr. F. Y. Sorrell and Dr. A. B. Thompson sitting on the bank of a creek, fishing and spinning yarns. I don't see any fish lying around anywhere near them. Sprock Duckett is farther down the creek, digging worms with all the old zeal and enthusiasm that he used to dig up nerves and muscles in Anatomy lab.

"C. L. Cope is swearing eloquently and enthusiastically as he works on his McCormick Tractor. A. C. Carter and Vernor Bridges are dividing their time between digging up grass and leading on their hoes.

"Here comes Dr. J. N. Reeves, who seems to be in a hurry. I find that John Elliott's baby has the whooping cough.

"Now I see a lawyer's office in one of our largest cities. J. E. Pierce is consulting R. W. Winston on some point of law. E. E. Upchurch is Winston's partner.

"The newspaper gives us the information that Dr. J. W. Beavers has just isolated the mumps bacillus. P. E. Berry and A. T. Brickhouse are working together on an experiment, the nature of which they will not divulge. Harry Chackeles gave up medicine to enter the diplomatic service and is ambassador to Turkey. J. N. Reeves and E. N. Phillips are waging war on yellow fever down in the Panama Canal Zone. L. R. Shaw and Paul McBee are teaching in the Medical Department of Tulane University. "Doc" Osborne and Hershel Lennan are joint proprietors of a drug store in Henderson, N. C. 'Rus' Terrell is jerking soda for them and seems to be familiar with his beverages.

"M. R. Sprinkle is teaching voice in Peabody Conservatory of Music. T. W. Richmond has become an efficient automobile salesman. He is now demonstrating a Chrysler Imperial '28' to 'Bob' Outland, a prospective buyer.

"Here are several of the old boys at a baseball game. The gentleman who is trying to call balls and strikes seems to be totally blind. Just as the spectators chase him off the field with 'pop' bottles, I recognize E. P. Thorne, who has at last found some use for his voice. The manager of the home team looks like Leonard Williams. Up in the bleachers I see an important looking fellow with a silk hat and a cane. He is W. G. Strond, the owner of the club."

The old animal's voice is getting weak now. The words are hard to make out but he goes on: "Ray Harmon is doing his part toward furthering the cause of humanity by devoting all his time to the care of the feeble-minded at the Caswell Training School. He is Superintendent and B. H. Knight is Head Physician.

"Charlie Padgett is still playing tennis. He is of very high rank now among the proponents of the sport in America.

"Now an old man with a long, white beard, J. A. Cornwell, has retired on account of feeble health after giving his best years to the Baptist cause.

"'Buck' Liverman and 'Bus' Fleming are practicing medicine at Saranac Lake, New York. They have done creditable work in the study of 'delirium tremens.' Jim Anderson and Vernon Davis are operating a resort hotel. W. R. Johnson is in charge of their bootlegging department.

"Bill Sullivan is Editor-in-Chief of the Whiz Bang and declares that he is making it bigger and better all the time. His chief competitor is W. C. Whitley, editor of College Humor.

"J. B. Wilder, always a ladies' man, is out in Reno, Nevada, trying to get a divorce from his second wife so that he can marry again.

"A. G. Johnson is a motorcycle dealer. R. L. Jones seems to be interested in buying one of the things. He is too old to ride, but I guess he knows what he is doing.

"Carlyle McDowell is mayor of Cherryville, N. C. He has remained obdurate to all the charms of the fair sex and will probably continue to be a bachelor as long as he lives.

"T. R. Garrett is a prominent merchant in Charlotte. W. V. Carroll is pastor of one of the churches. R. L. Gay is coaching the midget basketball team at the Y. M. C. A. J. C. Casper is Superintendent of Charlotte City Schools."

I can scarcely make out a syllable of what he says now but I catch enough of it to learn that R. C. Benthall is a leader in Tammany Hall and E. L. Wells, Jr., is making a fortune from the sale of his latest volume of free verse.

Now that the destinies of all my classmates have been revealed, I seek to learn my own but the old fellow looks at me dumby as if to say. "Oh, that's easy! Can't you imagine that? Why, you will be lynched for writing this prophesy."

PROPHET.

Junior Class Poem

THE trail leads onward into mist—
Beyond; the Vision Splendid,
Behind: the duties we have done,
Or neglected—freely candid!

Too much learning, it is true,
Saps the heady wine of youth,
So we have sought a median strain
(Just another sterling truth!)

But just beyond the jolly present
Is the future and its quest,
With Chance, and Hope, and Labor
Waiting armor for the best!

We welcome you, Dame Future!
With all that you may hold,—
But we tarry yet another year
Just prospecting for Gold!

History of the Junior Class

OUT of the storm and stress, banishment and exile, criticism and praise, the class of 1929 has emerged as a shining example to those who follow in its footsteps.

We the junior class, as we stand on the threshold of seniorhood, look back on our past, which was fraught with great achievements as well as perils and dangers, and feel, with a thrill of pride that we have really accomplished something which will always be carved in the sacred annals of dear old Wake Forest. It may be justly said that the "Great Class of '29" was a class of precedent, for it possessed a spirit never before dreamed of by a like bunch of ex-high seniors.

It is evident that the class of '29, in its freshman stage of collegiate life, was intent upon establishing a precedent and was imbued with an undying spirit which, as its members believed, would ultimately end in a better feeling of brotherly love and affection on the campus.

We arrived in Wake Forest in the fall of 1925, three hundred strong, overflowing with memories of grand and glorious days of high school superciliousness. However, it did not take long for the proverbial chip to be knocked from our shoulders, and we settled down in our blissful state of green ignorance.

Perhaps the greatest event of our embryonic stage at Wake Forest was "Ye Freshman Smoker." Breaking all traditions, we instituted an event that will long remain to freshman classes as a beacon light in a stormy sea. We realize that, in holding this smoker, we aroused myriads of criticisms and a great deal of hatred which, we are glad to say, have passed into oblivion. Consequently, we maintain that we felt and still feel that this smoker was one means of bringing about a better feeling between the two lower classes as well as a brotherly unity in the freshman class itself. We think that, by instituting this custom, we have lightened the burden of freshman classes for years to come. A concrete example of this friendlier feeling was the Freshman-Sophomore Smoker which was held in 1926.

During our freshman year (1925-26), A. A. Lennon was president, C. A. Upehurch was vice president, and W. D. Holoman was secretary. During the sophomore year (1926-27), T. V. Hackney was president, R. M. Fales was vice president, and E. A. MacMillan was secretary. This past year, we were under the able leadership of J. C. Ashcraft as president; . . . . . as vice president and . . . . . as secretary. There are many others who have been and still are leaders who helped to make the class one which will long be remembered, but an attempt to record the names and deeds of these would be literally impossible. Suffice it to say, the class is notably represented in all branches of academic, athletic, literary, and social endeavor.

In conclusion, we of the junior class, pledge our undivided support to our Alma Mater in anything that she may endeavor to do. We humbly hope that during our senior year we may continue to bring praise and honor to her noble name which we have so faithfully revered in the past. May our very words and actions set such an example that our beloved College may continue to be a veritable heaven on earth where every one may work in perfect unity.

Sophomore Class Poem

TWO years have fled on golden wings
Since first we entered these portals dear,
To prepare ourselves for best of things
That life distributes year by year.
Tomorrow, memories of today will bring
A laugh, a sigh, and then a tear.

The voice of the Future roars in our soul;
The hopes within our breasts surge high,
But let us grasp all that's on our road,
That many shun and many pass by:
For only dreams can reach that goal
That stretches on beyond the sky.

But 'ere we depart to the world ahead,
Lest we forget the debt we owe,
In the many paths that we shall tread,
To Alma Mater whom we love so
We can't repay, but pledge instead—
Our faith, our trust, forevermore.

Sophomore Class History

SINCE the days of the prophets of old no man has been endowed with the power and wisdom to look into the future and point out the destinies of men. But even though the most gifted in our group cannot tell what the future will bring there is not one among us who cannot tell what has happened in the past.

When we the members of the class of '30 made our first appearance at Wake Forest we possessed the usual Freshmen characteristics. We were green; of course we were green. It is generally understood that the class of '30 contained the greenest bunch of Freshmen that has come to Wake Forest for many years. (This means previous to the arrival of the class of '31.)

Many of our number realized one of their greatest ambitions when they became college students. They had thought that becoming college students would bring with it a certain kind of greatness. But alas, when the rules which a "Newish" must obey were read in our hearing the greatness of the new situation began to diminish with tremendous rapidity. We at once saw that the directors in this institution expected the students here to utilize every minute of their time and constantly to be busy at something that tends to direct the human mind and character toward those things which mean the most in a man's life. The majority of our number immediately saw that all these rules were to our advantage and instead of offering any disapproval took things seriously and went to work. As a result time fairly flew, so to speak, and it seemed only a very short while until we learned that it was time for us to quit being Freshmen and become members of the student body.

Many interesting things happened before we were allowed to discard our caps. In fact, so many things happened that it is impossible to mention even half of them in this short theme. But there are four things that we must not leave out since the memory of them is stamped on the minds of the members of the class of '30 and we know that we shall never forget them.

1. We shall never forget how to "button."
2. We shall never forget the day we had our pictures made.
3. We shall never forget the snows.
4. We shall never forget the Freshman-Sophomore smoker.

As is stated in the beginning of this history it is impossible for us to say exactly what any man will do in days and years to come. But by a careful study of a person's past life and habits we can sometimes guess quite correctly what that person will do under certain circumstances. With this fact in view it is perfectly natural for us to suppose that when members of the class of '30 become absent-minded professors and some one utters the word "button" in their hearing they are liable to immediately set themselves in a position that will afford much amusement for all others present and great embarrassment for themselves.

When we had our pictures made we had a grand opportunity to impress all the on-lookers with the fact that each member of the class of '30 was built for speed. In our past life very likely we have wasted many valuable opportunities, but that was one time we put an opportunity to the best possible advantage. We are told that when the signal was given to go even Poe threw away his crutches and set out with such speed that he arrived at his city of refuge far ahead of many of his long-legged able-bodied contemporaries.

At the Freshman-Sophomore smoker Al Lennon, who was president of the preceding Freshman class and then an outstanding member of the student body, and others made speeches which caused us to have a different feeling toward school and fellow students. Since that time there has been more cooperation between the members of our class and the members of other classes. Somehow a spirit of brotherhood was established which is bound to live through the years to come and cause Wake Forest students to realize that our school is one large family where the happiness of each member is dependent on the actions of the other members.

When we arrived at Wake Forest last September we saw a host of familiar faces. It was almost like coming back home after having been away for several months. Every one was happy to see his friends. Here and there, however, we saw boys who had come to Wake Forest for the first time. It was easy to see that they were thinking and feeling just about like we thought and felt the year before.

We immediately set about to give our new friends a hearty welcome. Naturally this called for a "shirt tail" parade; the welcome would have been incomplete without it. Even though we had this parade no serious hazing was carried on and we are proud to say that the class of '30 has shown to the class of '31 a friendship unsurpassed by any other Sophomore class in the State.

Many Sophomores have been active in athletics. As Freshmen we had good teams and this year several members of our class were in the varsity line-ups.

The Sophomore class is not the largest class in school. But in our group there are boys who have contributed immensely toward making our college community a better place in which to live. We love Wake Forest, we have the highest regard and esteem for our faculty and we shall always back the "Demon Deacons" whether they win or lose.

The Class of '31

ALL hail, Wake Forest!
Let swing your famous portals wide,
And open up your halls of pride
That we may enter and abide
—The Class of '31!

We've come, Wake Forest,
In answer to your mighty call
That rings in ev'ry tutor's hall
With pow'r to conquer and enthral
—The Class of '31!

We're here, Wake Forest,
To work, to win, to emulate;
To sup where sages gone have sate;
To magnify thine own estate
—The Class of '31!

Behold, Wake Forest,
E'en now we feel thy sacred flame—
E'en now we love thy holy name—
E'en now we share thine ancient fame—
—The Class of '31!

To thee, Wake Forest,
We promise our fidelity,
Our service, love, and loyalty,
Our pray'rs for thy longevity
—The Class of '31!

Freshman Class History

SEPTEMBER the 13th was the day set apart to admit freshmen. A well organized committee, which met the "freshies" as they came, with eyes wide open, did much to eliminate the many problems that usually confront the first year men as they make their debut on the college campus. Some of the cautious ones were undecided about leaving their troubles to this committee, thinking it might be a self-appointed committee meeting them with nothing in view except sport and excitement.

After our limited knowledge of student life had been fully exhibited on many occasions and the upperclassmen had laughed themselves sick, most of us 172, besides special students, had managed to register and find our rooms and boarding club. We then began to turn our eyes about to see what was here. At every turn some one was there willing to give us the information we needed. In the chapel, classrooms, and library, members of the faculty spoke to us about our new life and environment and told us how to become adjusted to conditions.

To get better acquainted and understand one another better we were chased out the second night of school for the annual "shirt tail parade." Our singing, speaking, and running ability were tested since we had to stand up before the crowd, tell where we were from, sing—for instance, "How Green I Am," then as the crowd disbanded the fun really and truly started. It seemed that at least four upperclassmen dashed after each "freshy" as the yell went up "Freshmen get in your holes." Some went to their rooms, the lucky ones; others came in later in the night.

This by no means ended our initiation, for at various times throughout the session we have been humiliated and forced to "get the bottom round" or batten at a ball game as the grand stands roared with laughter. At other times we had the pleasure of writing papers, copying or running errands for an upperclassman. However we realize the need and benefit of it all.

As we review the activities of the freshman class for the last session we find not a blank or shameful record but one that does credit to the school. The spirit manifested by the freshmen toward the college and upperclassmen speaks well for the future of our school. In considering freshman athletics the success of the football team is very noticeable being made up of heavy fast stars. To bring our successful football season to a climax we defeated the varsity, who early in the season downed the Carolina eleven. In recognition of our success, combined with their benevolent spirit, Dr. Gaines and wife entertained the freshman football squad in their home in a very hospitable manner. Every man present had a most pleasant evening and left with a deeper devotion for Dr. Gaines and family. For basketball the team is doing great. Only some misfortune will stop the winning streak they have started. As for the basketball team the success seems to be unquestionable, from the number of high school stars that will don a uniform when the call comes.

Athletics have not by any means claimed the only attention of the freshman class, but in collegiate debate, publications, classrooms and all branches of college activities, the freshmen have taken their places, very willingly and with interest. The band, which was organized early in the fall, is made up chiefly of freshman.

Our work has been interrupted very little this year except for a severe epidemic of mumps which broke out early in the fall and claimed quite a large number of students, but with the proper attention and care none suffered unnecessarily.

The freshman class is fortunate having chosen the following men for officers: T. A. Hauser, President; S. A. Benton, Vice President; Jack Parker, Secretary. They have shown great interest in the welfare of the freshman class.

This class is a unique one. For the first time in history we had the honor and privilege of having our pictures put in the HOWLER in individual form instead of group form as heretofore. Then again we are the first class to enter under our new president, Dr. Gaines. Long before we came to Wake Forest we had learned to admire, respect and love Dr. W. L. Potter who for twenty-one years faithfully and successfully guided our beloved college into its wonderful achievements. In our new President we are sure the college has a man at its head who will make Wake Forest even a greater and better college.

HISTORIANS.

Freshmun Proficcy

Won who has been intimately acquainted with the members of the grate klass of '931 does not have to bee a profit to beforetell there grate suckcess, we all no that their aint never been a klass hear at Wake Forest that had more promise of doin' sumthin when they git out.

For instants take Mr. Hauser our prezident of our klass, he is a grate athlete and a reel gentilman two, he plays footbawl on one end of our footbawl team, he knows his stuff two bout as good as enybody cep'in mahey the farkety, he dont mind it a bit playin footbawl on the very end by hisself. And could he tackle, i wood not ast you that? I no hell make a grate kooch sumtime.

Another won that will bee sumbody is Jit Benton, he is won of the biggest footbawl players you nearbout ever seed and when he wood carrey the bawl everbody else would stop and look, always he wood make a Tutchdown nearbout ever time. We proficcy that he will be a grate tinner singer sumtime though because he can sing nearbout as good as Jean Austin awlready.

Then there is a reel cow boy in our klass up hear that come all the way from Texas up hear. We dont no but he says that he can throw a javceyin over a hundred and forty 7 corn rows, he said that ometime he throwed fore of them nine teen pound shoots clean away one time. This hear feller John Louis Dupree will go in two the show busyness sumtime.

Now this hear feller in our klass named Red Taylor that cum hear from the Harricain is a gene-wine good basket-bawl player, he dribbles all the time while he is playing, he looks more natural though workin on his old Moon, i guess hell be a oughtomobal mekannic.

Erskine Heatherly can rite reel poultry, most everbody has red his poem bout "At home and abroad both far and near" ect. We beleve that sum day he will be poat larrit of the hole country.

Then this mr. Hess in our klass shore is a laddies man and he shore has got a purtrey girl and curley hair, hell probly git married.

Little "Pistul Pete" Jenkins is won of the smartest boyes around hear cause he goes round hear all the time and never says a word to nobody none of the time, he oughta be a flossofer by the time he is an old man cause he has allreddy thought of a few things.

Mr. Frosh newberry is a nuther member of our klass and a reel good drum beeter, he plays on our brass band. Know doubt Soosie are sumboddy like that will git him two play on his orchester.

Two fellers hear in our klass from New York is Samuel Levine and Benjamin Gellis, they are both good footbawl players both of em. Sam plays up there in front whure they all squat down in a line and Ben plays back their with them other three fellers and totes the footbawl. They'll probably both go in the store busyness sumtime.

K. Covington plays the piano and fullback, he is hot on all both of em. Hell be apt to keep on playing the piano after he gits two old too play footbawl enyemore.

Ralph Gillespie is a member of our klass to and he can throw a bassbawl clean over Doackter Paschal's barn. Detroitt will be moren likely to git him to throw bassbawls for them.

Paul Hutchins is a nuther member of our klass also, and he can run fastern nearbout enybody even if he is little. He plays footbawl right out there with them there groan men, their aint no tellin what hell do after he gits out, we beleve hell make a reel suckcess.

We do not have space to describe in de tail what ever member of our klass are going too do but we no that we will make a grate suckcess all of us be cause we no more than most of folks allreddy and we have finished high school two. Knoww dont youll here from us agin.

So, I must close,

FRESHMUN PROFIT.

Law Class History

December 19, 1927.

AND still the Wake Forest Law School grows! Both in reputation and in the number of students enrolled!

To begin with, the summer session of 1927 furnished 49 out of the total 97 who were granted license by the Supreme Court at the August examination. So it appears that practically half of the new lawyers in North Carolina are Wake Forest men. The members of the summer class represented 28 schools, colleges, and universities scattered up and down the Atlantic Coast States.

In regard to the class as a whole this fall, I have been able to ascertain the total enrollment, which is 174. This number will be increased very much by new students entering school for the spring semester.

In the Law Class this year we find representatives of every athletic team of the college, the debating teams, the band, and what not. We find one man who last year was picked by sport writers as a member of both the All-State Basketball and Baseball Teams. This same man was high scorer in basketball circles of the State last year. Another of our law students has gained distinction for the Law Class by having been elected President of the Student Body.

In regard to the Senior Law Class I find from statistics that 43 men entered college in the fall of 1924 signifying their intentions to pursue work leading toward a LL.B. degree. At the present writing I find that, of this number that started out with such a goal in view, approximately 25 have stood the test of time and are now continuing their work. From this Senior Class the Law Class as a whole has elected its President, Vice President, and other important officers. We have in the class six licensed attorneys at the present time, and the other members intend to take the Supreme Court examinations either at the January or the August meeting of the Court. A large number of these men have put off taking the "exam" on account of their inability to meet the age requirement.

The Senior Class is by no means without its athletes. Ralph James is a three-letter man, having made letters in football, basketball, and baseball. He has made All-State teams in two of these sports, and has received mention for the other. Key Joyner is an All-State pitcher, Padgett is a member of the varsity football squad and saw service in a number of games. George Montagne is a member of the college golf team just organized on the campus this fall. We also find members of our class interested in other lines of campus activity, but they are too numerous to mention.

THE MEDICAL CLASS

Medical Class History

PHYSICIANS, of all men, are most happy; whatever good success they may have, the world proclaims; and what faults they commit, the earth covereth."

A definition of history in its broadest sense means everything that the class has done, either in general or in a particular capacity. That being true, it would be an impossibility to mention all of the facts of our class, because space forbids it. The purpose of this history is to merely enumerate in a few words some of the things that make this one of the greatest classes since the department which we represent became one of the main factors of the college.

As a class we first became a unit when we undertook the study of Osteology, September 15, 1926. No one knows or can imagine the toil, agony, and worry that was our share during the year. Obstacles after obstacle piled up as mountains before us, yet we struggled on faithfully and finally came out victorious. It is interesting to note that our class is the largest ever known in the history of the Medical School. We commenced our journey with thirty-six men, and only two withdrew, thus leaving thirty-four that continued the battle. It will have to be admitted that our class is out of the ordinary, since more than one-third of the class secured B.A. or B.S. degrees before entering the Medical School. Not only that, but our class is made up of professors, dentists, pharmacists, students, and Dr. Kitchen intimated that there might be a possibility of a few good "Mechanics and Farmers." Most of our men received their pre-medical training here at Wake Forest. Those coming from other schools are: Knight, from Willson and Mary; Fleming, from University of North Carolina; Harrell, from Guilford College; and Dr. Osborne (dentist) from Atlanta Dental College.

In the field of research we have not been lacking. Liverman, honored in the early fall of 1926, that by cutting the Internal Jugular Vein that there is a chance of dying "quickly." Peake also has noted that a cup-full of Oil of Mustard is just a bit too much for one dose. "Shot Gardner" is still wondering why the brain does not become intoxicated since the blood circulates through the "Circle of Willis." Harmon anticipates writing an explanation as to the function of the appendix, and Brickhouse expects to make a thorough study of the spleen and liver in order to know the difference in their function.

As yet we do not know where we shall pursue our further studies. We are launched, but we know not where to anchor. However we expect to have representatives in various schools in the United States. There has been one special request made as to their abode, and that is giving Fleming a chance to camp in Mount Wrangell, in Alaska, because he is subjected to "smothering spells," and the United States is too mild for him.

From the first day, even until now as we near the end, our stay at Wake Forest College has been one of happiness and sorrow, much work, and a friendly spirit of cooperation, among both students and faculty.

The record that our class has made is one of which to be proud. Even though we are in the embryonic stage of development in the vast field of medical knowledge, we can realize the rewards of our labors. We feel that our achievements have been made possible by the capable leadership and inspiration of our dean, Dr. T. D. Kitchen, and the competent work and opportunities rendered to us by our faculty.

As we leave our Alma Mater we carry with us the lasting memories of the excellent privileges extended to us by our professors, and we well know that opportunities improved become stepping stones to success, but opportunities neglected will be mill-stones around our necks, thus we pledge ourselves to ever uphold her high ideals.

THE MINERAL CLASS

Ministerial Class History

IT is with interest that men look back upon the history of a living organization. It is still more interesting for those who have been directly connected with such an organization to look back over their lives and feel thrilled and inspired anew with the memory of the incidents and sweet fellowships which it has given. May this review of the Ministerial Class of Wake Forest College be such that it will arouse the interest of those who read it and cause them to be more interested in the Master's work and draw them closer to Him.

Since history aids progress and to a great extent governs the future, may this be a beacon light that will guide the lives of mankind to see God face to face.

As we look back over the past four years, we notice that this year's class is smaller than usual; the numbers being ninety-seven, one hundred and seven, and eighty-four each year in order, and seventy-seven this year. Although the class is below par in number, it won't admit being inferior to classes heretofore in any way.

These young men, who are from all parts of North Carolina and some parts of other states and one from Japan, have denied secular professions and have left the ship, fishing nets, and other occupations in the hands of their father and friends to answer the call of Jesus as the disciples did. In order to make themselves more efficient followers of Him they have come to Wake Forest College. Some of the class, having heard the Macedonian call, are preparing themselves for places as teachers, preachers, and medical missionaries on the foreign fields.

Aside from the regular routine of lessons, the group has a meeting of each Wednesday evening with its president, Mr. Joe E. Roach, in charge. The evening programs vary. Most of the time the class, led by its beloved teacher, Dr. Culbom, studies some vital problems in a minister's life. This is a great benefit to each member. Sometimes members of the faculty and other distinguished men are secured to speak to the group. Thus the class hears some wonderful lectures and gets much valuable advice and information.

In addition to the academic work the class takes an active part in campus activities. In almost every organization on the campus we find some members of this group. In fact, it furnishes more men in proportion to its number in some of these organizations than any other class. The literary societies, the B. Y. P. U., and Sunday school classes are good examples of this. These men not only bring honor to themselves in these organizations, but they contribute in bringing honors to their dear old Alma Mater.

While the men are bringing honor to the college, some of them are blessing the communities in different places carrying the blessed "word of life." Of this number of men twenty are ordained and twelve are active pastors.

Now, in conclusion, the members of this group wish to express their appreciation to Dr. W. L. Poteat, president emeritus, for his love, faithfulness, and sympathy toward the group. Likewise each man has already felt the magnetic personality, love, and enthusiasm of the new president, Dr. F. P. Gaines, toward the class. With such a leader, for whom the group is truly grateful, the class is looking forward to having a greater Alma Mater and doing greater work in helping bring about "the kingdom of God" here on earth.

W. V. CARROLL, Historian.

It was a very strenuous kind of athletics that the former Wake Forest Students were engaged in from 1861 to 1865. The college virtually closed its doors with the Commencement of 1861. The young men of the State were away at the front in the great game of war. Practically every student, fit for military service, except ministers of the gospel, who had been at Wake Forest since 1834, was enlisted in the Confederate States' Army. In the General Catalogue we find the names of two hundred and ninety-two of them, with the list doubtless incomplete. Of these one hundred and eight became commissioned officers, lieutenants, captains, colonels, surgeons, chaplains, and one, John G. Jones, of Person County, a brigadier general. General Jones was killed in battle. Fifty-two others of the Wake Forest men who enlisted lost their lives in that fratricidal struggle. Some day there will be a monument to their memory on the Campus.

Here's to Wake Forest

Oh Here's to Wake Forest, a glass of the finest,
 Bright, sparkling Rhenish filled up to the brim.
 Her sons they are many, unrivaled by any,
 With hearts o'erflowing we will sing her a hymn.

CHORUS

Rah, Rah, Wake Forest, Rah!
 Old Alma Mater's sons we are,
 We'll herald her story and die for her glory,
 Old Gold and Black is ever waving high.

As Fresh we adore her, as Sophs we explore her,
 And carve our names upon her ancient walls;
 As Juniors we patrol her, as Seniors extol her,
 And weep to leave for'er her sacred halls.

Chorus

Though fortune forsake us and fate o'ertake us,
 We'll ne'er forget our dear old college days,
 And o'er memory's treasure we'll drink without measure,
 And sing for'er our Alma Mater's praise.

BEAT TAR HEELS FOURTH STRAIGHT

For the fourth consecutive year the Demon Deacons defeated the Tar Heels of the University in a curtain-raising game at Chapel Hill. In each of the four years the Deacons have gone into the fray admittedly the underdog. But in each occasion Wake Forest has done the unexpected and routed the Heels. The 1927 game was a thriller from start to finish, with the work of young Johnny Cox, sophomore star, outstanding. The final score was 9-8. Ten thousand fans packed the stands at Emerson to witness this game, which has become the outstanding "classic" of the North Carolina football season.

"FIGHTING CHRISTIANS" SPRING SURPRISE

The following week saw a decided slump in Demon Deacon football stock when in a game on Gore Field, the Elon Christians fought Coach Baldwin's eleven to a scoreless tie. The Wake Forest offensive could never muster the final punch necessary to push across a score. The Christians fought the Wake Forest aggregation on practically even terms throughout the game, and as the final whistle sounded the Elon backs had advanced the ball to within the five yard mark.

P. C. REPEATS

In the third game of the season, the Deacons lost for the second consecutive year to Presbyterian College of South Carolina. The game, played in Asheville, dedicated Asheville's new municipal stadium. Wake Forest battled gamely against the South Carolinians, but was forced to bow, 14 to 7. The game was played before a capacity crowd for the new World War Memorial Stadium. Students from Bingham Military Academy, Asheville Normal, and Asheville School for boys, augmented the crowd. Four bands were on hand for the dedicatory exercises, which preceded the game.

WOLFPACK WINS

For the third straight year the Wolfpack of N. C. State handed the Deacons a defeat. The 1927 game was originally carded for Fair Week, but the cancellation of the fair left the game on Thursday, October 13, with no particular drawing card. Jack McDowall, All-Southern star for the Techs, was the big noise for Wake Forest's opposition. His punting, passing and running, potent factors in many of State's victories of 1927, played no small part in the defeat of the Deacons. Wake Forest was at last able to push across a score. The final count was 30 to 7.

ANOTHER TIE WITH WILDCATS

Following a tradition of three year's standing, the Demon Deacons and the Wildcats of Davidson College fought to a 13-13 tie in a hard fought battle at Greensboro. Two phenomenal runs by Johnny Cox, Deacon star, were responsible for Wake Forest's two touchdowns, while the Wildcats' markers came as a result of a frantic rally by the Presbyterians. Assistant Coach Fred Emmerson was in charge of the Wake Forest aggregation in the absence of Coach Jim Baldwin, who had been called to Massachusetts because of the death of his father. The game was played in Greensboro's new stadium.

BLUE DEVILS STRUT STUFF

Jankoski and his gang of devilish Blue Devils from Duke came to Gore field on October 29 and handed Wake Forest the first licking it has received from a Duke University football team. The final score was 32 to 7. The game was an uphill scrap for Wake Forest throughout. The Devils' offensive was brilliant and flashing, and Wake Forest was powerless against it. Jankoski and Hollingsworth starred for the visitors. The Deacons rallied near the close of the game to score a touchdown, and save themselves a whitewashing.

PURPLE HURRICANE STRIKES

Billy Laval and his Furman University Purple Hurricane rode through a demoralized Wake Forest team on November 5, and when the big wind had died down and the game was over, the score was 53 to 0. Wake Forest was helpless from the first, and the South Carolinians were able to run at ease through the Deacons. It was the worst defeat the Deacons have suffered since pre-Garrity days. The Furman coach inserted his second string men into the fracas, but still the slaughter progressed. The Wake Forest eleven put up a brave fight in the face of such opposition, but the fight was hopeless.

DEACONS SCORE TWICE ON MARINES

The next week found the Wake Forest team on Virginia soil for a game with the football team of the Quantico Marines of Quantico, Virginia. The Marine eleven, composed of powerful ex-college men, was rated as many touchdowns better than the Wake Forest team, but hard fighting enabled Wake Forest to score twice, a touchdown and a field goal from the toe of Ralph James. The Marines came to the front in the last half, and Wake Forest's scoring for the day was ended. Ralph James and Johnny Cox showed up well for the Deacon backfield in this game, while the whole line played a noble game.

FIFTEEN RAHS! WAKE FOREST WINS A GAME

Jack Boylin and his High Point College Purple Panthers envisioned themselves as conquerors of the Mighty Deacons. And the Deacons themselves didn't feel so confident. High Point was riding on the crest and Wake Forest had been for the whole season the lowest of under dogs. It was Boylin's opportunity to turn the tables and hand his Albu Mater an inglorious licking. But things went somewhat astray, and the Demons held to this last shred of their self-respect by handing the Boylin-coached eleven a 14-0 licking.

MERCER BEARS TROUNCE DEACONS IN FINAL GAME

Mercer put an end to the most disastrous football season the Wake Forest College football team has suffered in many years on Thanksgiving Day in Asheville. "Phoney" Smith, brilliant Mercer star led his team to a smashing 34-0 victory over Coach Baldwin's Deacons. Wake Forest, as usual had no offensive to offer, and in this instance were more helpless than usual on the defensive. The game was the second played in 1927 in Asheville's new stadium. In contrast to the capacity crowd of the Presbyterian College game, the game with Mercer was attended by only a few fans.

Review of Season

AS compared with Wake Forest College basketball teams of other years, the 1928 quint suffered a disastrous season. As the usual thing Wake Forest cage teams can be counted on to do great things, no matter how inferior may be the teams that represent the college in other branches of sport. In 1927 the Deacons had one of the best court seasons, winning twenty-one out of twenty-four games played, and emerging at the close of the season in a tie with the University of North Carolina for the State Championship. But that was 1927. This year the Deacons played twenty games, winning only six, four of which were with college teams. Only one North Carolina team was sunk by the Deacon quint throughout the entire season.

Hopes of Deacon followers ran high as the 1928 court season commenced. The Deacon team of 1927 was back with the loss of only Emmerson and Ober to dim their ranks. Wake Forest followers hoped, somehow, that Coach Baldwin would be able to find or develop men to fill these positions. Emmerson and Ober were powerful factors in the State Championship quint of a year ago, however, and filling their vacant berths was not as easy as talking about it. The Deacon mentor tried all the tall boys who reported for tryouts for Emmerson's job at center, and rejected them one by one. None seemed to have the proper qualifications. The job finally came back to one on the team. Al Dowtin, star forward of the previous year's quint, seemed to be the only logical man for the job. Al had the height, and as the season progressed it became evident that he had the ability. But it was self-evident that if the star of the team was moved from one position to another, there must be someone to take that first position.

Scarboro, a newcomer to the squad, and George Paschal, of the 1927 squad, rose together to this position. "Stubby" Carter and Hal Weir shared the guard position made vacant by the graduation of Ober. Ralph James was back at his forward job of last year, with Bob Owen likewise back at his guard position.

With this material on hand for the team, Wake Forest supporters anticipated with a great deal of pleasure the 1928 basketball season—a great deal more than which they can muster now in retrospect.

The Deacons got into action first against the Raleigh V. M. C. A. team, and emerged victors by a 45-29 count. The entire Wake Forest team showed flashes of good basketball in this contest, and the forty-five points amassed by the Deacons were well distributed among the members of the team. Shortly after this game came the first college game of the season. N. C. State furnished the opposition in the game, which was played in the Raleigh Auditorium on the night of the 19th of January. Wake Forest furnished game opposition to the Red Terrors, but were unable to stem the tide of Tech victory. The final score was 47-41 against the Deacons. This was the first of a three game series with the west Raleigh aggregation and the first of three defeats for Wake Forest.

Next on the schedule came a game with the Tar Heels of the University of North Carolina—again played at the Auditorium. The score at half time was knotted at 17-17, Al Dowtin having penetrated the Carolina defense for ten of his team's points. His guns were silenced in the last half, and he was not able to score a single point. This game was also the first of a three game series, and the first of three victories for the University.

In the third collegiate tilt of the season, Wake Forest lost to Duke University by the overwhelming count of 45-17. Wake was completely outclassed by the Methodists. The Deacons scored only six points throughout the entire second half, while DeHart's quint was finding the basket for 22 points. After a second game with the Red Terrors of State College, in which they were defeated by a one-point margin, the Deacons took to the road for the first trip of the season. On a five day tour of Virginia, they played four games with college and independent organizations in Virginia and Washington.

The first game of this trip, played with Hampden Sidney College, resulted in another close defeat for Coach Baldwin's quint. With the score tied at fourteen-fourteen at the close of the first half, the two quints fought bitterly throughout the remainder of the game, with the Virginians finally emerging on top of a 28-26 score. Al Dowtin was high scorer for both teams with twelve points. The next night saw another close defeat for the Deacons. Richmond "Y" was this time the victor, by a score of 30-26. Dowtin, with sixteen points, again topped the scoring for both quints. William and Mary was Wake Forest's next conqueror, doubling the score on the Deacons in a game played at Williamsburg. Wake Forest scored only eight points during the first half, six of which were foul shots. The Richmond Artillery took a thriller from the Demons, 33-32. Wake Forest had a one point advantage at half time, but was unable to hold its advantage. The last night of the trip the Wake Forest team spent in Washington, and won the only game of their trip. George Washington University was the goat in this instance, and the score was 27-26.

Another game with State College faced the returning Demons, and another defeat. This third and final game of the series was played in the Thompson Memorial Gymnasium at State College, and the final score was 45-30. Wake Forest was simply facing a better organized and a better coached team, and the ultimate outcome was evident from the first. In the second home game of the season, William and Mary again humbled Coach Baldwin's quint. After having scored a 48-24 victory over the Deacons in the first game between the two teams, the Virginia quint was content with handing the Wake Forest team a 42-28 licking in this second instance.

This place in the schedule may be considered a turning point in the season of the Deacons. Having played listless basketball throughout all the games played up until this time, the Wake Forest quint suddenly took a new lease on life, and won four of the remaining eight games on the schedule. Duke was the first game to taste Wake Forest's new life, and although they won, by a slight margin, they knew they had been in a basketball game. Wake Forest was constantly the aggressor, and it was a bare 37-34 victory that the Methodists were able to win. Next the Demon Deacons played Elon in a game here at Wake Forest, and won 49-47. Wake Forest had a 35-22 lead at the half, but the visitors recovered to come within two points of tying the score in the last half. Following the Elon game the Wake Forest quint took to the road again, this time to play the last six games on their schedule.

The University of North Carolina was first on the card. Once more the Tar Heels were able to hand the Deacons a licking, this time by a 29-17 count. Davidson and Charlotte "Y" routed the Wake Forest quint in the following two games, the first by the walkaway score of 51-27, and the second by a 47-35 count. The next night the Deacons went to Lyons, South Carolina, to engage Fred Emerson's Pacific Mills team in a game. The Pacific Mills quint, one of the most powerful independent teams in South Carolina, fell under the Baptist attack, 46-34. The last two games of the season were played in Asheville, and both resulted in victories for Wake Forest. Wofford furnished the opposition in the first contest, which resulted in a 64-28 victory for the Deacons. The second game of the pair played in Asheville was with Presbyterian College of South Carolina. Wake Forest's 36-29 victory assuaged to some extent the wound of P. C.'s two consecutive victories over Wake Forest football teams in Asheville.

A final round-up of the season shows that Wake Forest scored 671 points against 774 for the aggregate opposition. The season did not come up the usual Wake Forest court standard, but the sprint at the close of the season saved the situation from the calamitous ending that might have followed the calamitous earlier games.

THE VARSITY SQUAD, 1928

AL DOWNTIN—Al Downtin is one of those rare baseball lights that grows brighter each year. In 1926, on Bob Hays' freshman baseball team, he played a fairly good game of ball, but was not heralded as a brilliant star. In 1927, however, he showed the Deacon marches a new kind of baseball, and when the season was over, he was easily recognized as the State's most brilliant second baseman. He was chosen unanimously for the All-State college baseball team, being one of five men in the State who was awarded this distinction. Al is looking better than ever this year, and should see the best year of his career.

R. E. JAMES—James entered here in 1924. While here he has made a record almost unbeatable. He won ten games his freshman year and finished that season by whitewashing the Championship Varsity 1 to 0. He was selected on the All-State Team. Ralph's curve ball and his ability have carried him through '26-'27 as a hero, State College being defeated by him five times out of five games. He has been selected on the All-State Team for both '26 and '27. We lose him this spring and we wish and predict for him much success in professional baseball.

O. K. JOYNER—Joyner entered Wake Forest in 1924. He was selected on the All-State Freshman Team after winning eleven games for Coach Cadwell's Freshman Championship Team. His fast ball was a puzzle to opposing batters. His coolness, control and judgment have won for him the respect of every "Big Five" Team. Key pitched great ball in '26 and '27 and was selected for the All-State Team for both years. His personality and leadership have won for him the honor of being Captain for the 1928 Deacon Team. We lose him at the end of the year, but we shall ever read with interest of him as he climbs in the ranks of professional baseball.

JOE CLAYTON—Since the beginning of his college baseball career with the Wake Forest freshman team of 1925, Joe Clayton has been recognized as North Carolina's premier shortstop. His work with Wake Forest College varsity teams in 1926 and 1927 merited for him each year a position on the mythical All-State college nine. Joe, concluding his college work this spring, is planning to enter in June the ranks of professionalism. He has signed with the Chattanooga team of the Southern Association. He came to Wake Forest from Oak Ridge, where he was hailed as the player he has proven himself to be.

"PETE" JOYNER—"Pete" is probably the smallest collegiate baseball player in the State. Regardless of his tiny physique his paces from the hot corner are known far and wide for their speed and accuracy. He has had a very brilliant career as a baseball player since he entered college. He was a regular on the freshman team in '25 which won the State title by not losing a game. He and his teammates trounced the championship varsity that same year in a post season game. Wake Forest is losing a great athlete in little "Pete," and a prince of a sport.

KUYKENDALL—Kuykendall is one of the ablest catchers that has come the way of the Wake Forest college baseball team in many years. His peg to second base cannot be tampered with, as Wake Forest's opponents of last year can testify. Kirk and Phoebe Hodge are this year sharing the backstop position. Both are good men, and between them, the Deacons should not suffer in the matter of catchers. Kuykendall hails from Western North Carolina, that section of the state that has furnished Wake Forest so many of its athletes of the past four years.

PIT ALLEN—Young Mr. Pit Allen, a sophomore at Wake Forest College, and a member of the 1927 freshman baseball team, has made the 1928 edition of the Demon Deacon baseball aggregation in the capacity of utility man. Pit plays any position with facility, and in the infield he is a star at every position. Coach Caldwell has expressed himself as being highly pleased with the work Allen has given the team in the early days of the present season, and it is safe to assume that this young man from Lumberton will be heard from again.

OF PERSON—Big Ol Person is a member of the 1928 Demon Deacon hurling staff, and in his powerful way is developing rapidly into a man that can be trusted with the most dangerous hitters boasted by other members of the North Carolina "Big Five." Ol will long be remembered at Wake Forest for his feat of trimming a powerful University of North Carolina baseball team at Pinehurst two years ago. To cap the climax, Ol in this game shinned out a home run that set a course record down at the famous resort.

JACK PHELPS—Jack, in addition to being a member of the mythical All-State Football Team, is a baseball player of considerable skill. His Herculean strength has been a big factor in his wonderful success on the diamond as well as on the gridiron. His aggressiveness has done much to help Wake Forest win championships in the past. He was a regular on the championship freshman team in '25 and a member of the varsity championship team in '26.

WILLIE MOSS—Willie Moss, of Forest City and a star performer on Coach Bob Hays' star freshman football and baseball teams of 1925 and 1926, looms this year as the most logical contender for the first baseman's job on Coach Caddell's varsity nine this year. Moss is a consistent fielder and a safe hitter. His work may be relied upon in every game in which he plays. Following in the footsteps of the redoubtable Bill Riley, Willie faces a hard task in filling the shoes of the Albany (Georgia) star. His early work this year, however, points to a successful year for him.

AYDEN D. LASSITER—Ayden Lassiter, a star member of the Wake Forest freshman team of 1926 and a regular on Coach Baldwin's 1927 varsity aggregation, is one of the most reliable players on the Wake Forest roster. He is an accurate fielder, and is endowed with that indispensable baseball attribute—pop. At the bat he is consistent, and although not the best hitter on the squad, he may always be counted on for his share of the stick work. This spring he is making good with Coach John Caddell's varsity nine, and it is safe to predict for him another successful season.

FOUST—Fmst, the Captain of last year's freshman team, is a prospect for the 28 varsity berth. Although used as a catcher, third baseman and outfielder, last year by Coach Lingle, and displaying marked ability as a man well able to handle any position, he will in all probability be used as an outfielder this year. A willing mind coupled with ability makes him a man much wanted in all student activities.

TOM LANNING—Tom Lanning and Felda Hightower are slated, as the Howler goes to press, to bear the brunt of Wake Forest's southpaw hurling for the current season. Tom is in his second year here at Wake Forest, and it is safe to predict for him a brilliant career on North Carolina mounds this season. Wake Forest this year will have on its regular lineup seven left hand hitters out of nine players. Lanning has been busy in the first days of practice offering his curves to his own teammates, so as to enable them to solve the offerings of other North Carolina hurlers.

SCARBORO—This fleetfooted outfielder continues the stride that put him on Coach Baldwin's 1928 basketball team into the baseball season, and as we go to press, it seems definite that he will be a regular member of the 1928 Deacon baseball team. Scarboro is a junior, having been a member of the freshman football and baseball teams of 1925-26. He did not play a large part in the athletics of the college during his sophomore year, but this year he has taken a new lease on life and on his place on the basketball and baseball teams.

PAUL DORSETT—"Tanker" Dorsett, noted for his alertness and aggressiveness at end on the Deacon grid squad last fall, and who hails from Spencer, N. C., is one of the few survivors of Charlie Lingie's freshman baseball team on last spring. "Tanker" takes a healthy cut of that apple and trots about the outer garden with dependence that is dangerous for the batter. Young Dorsett bids fair to encounter the collegiate baseball circles in big letters during his remaining seasons on the diamond for Deacon town.

REVIEW OF TRACK SEASON, 1927

THE track team of '27 was characterized by a splendid spirit. It was this never-die spirit which enabled the team to hold on, for many old faces were missing when the team began the season. With the few available veterans and the new men coming on the team, Coach Utley soon whipped into shape one of the best teams that every represented Wake Forest.

Black Boy Daniel was the shining light of the team. He was unbeatable in the hurdles and broad jump, winning all three events in every meet of the year. Rackley was our best bet in the dashes. Captain Greene was one of the best middle distance runners in the State. Richmond and Powell turned in good records in the high jump. Henry and Collier shared honors in the mile and two-mile runs. The weight events were well taken care of by Holliday, Weston, Stradley and Cook.

Last year marked the beginning of a freshman track team. It enjoyed a successful season and promises to pass up to the varsity some valuable material. Kinsey and Cox will make somebody work for their money in the dashes and hurdles. Nance, Bowers and Thomson turned in good records in the longer runs. Plemmons should stand out among the first in the discus. Ty Jones will prove a valuable man in the pole vault. He has proved his value in this event in "prep" school.

The team this year has prospects for the best team in the history of the college. At the first call for the team a large number of old and new men reported. Richmond was elected captain of the team and great results are expected of the team this year. Wake Forest enters some of the indoor meets this year. This marks a new era in track at Wake Forest.

Resume of 1927 Season

THE tennis season last year was not one of marked success. The graduation of all varsity men except Captain Powers caused a scarcity in material which greatly affected the building up of a successful team. The team was composed of Powers (Capt.), Hall, Padgett, Epstein, Yates, Maxwell and Poovey. A schedule of matches with colleges in the State and a trip composed of Furman University of South Carolina, Presbyterian College, Wofford, and Lenoir-Rhyne was run off with our team winning a goodly number of the matches. In the State tournament the doubles team composed of Powers and Hall went to the semi-finals only to lose to the Carr-McCutcheon combination from Davidson who later won the cup.

This year the manager is planning a five-day trip to Virginia and also a schedule of matches in the State. High hopes are entertained for a winning team.

She Was a Phantom of Delight

She was a phantom of delight
When first she gleamed upon my sight;
A lovely Apparition, sent
To be a moment's ornament;
Her eyes as stars of Twilight fair;
Like Twilight's, too, her dusky hair;
But all things about her drawn
From May-time and the cheerful Dawn;
A dancing Shape, an Image gay,
To haunt, to startle, and waylay.

. . . . .
A Creature not too bright or good
For human nature's daily food;
For transient sorrows, simple wiles,
Praise, blame, love, kisses, tears, and smiles.

. . . . .
A perfect Woman, nobly plumed,
To warm, to comfort, and command;
And yet a Spirit still, and bright
With something of angelic light.

The cannon of the Civil War had hardly ceased to roar, when Wingate with the help of Professor Simmons and the Royalls, father and son, again opened Wake Forest College to students. This was in January, 1868, almost a full decade before the University was again in regular operation. A little later, on the invitation of Wingate, Mills came to the help of the little group. For them it was largely a labor of love, for the endowment had almost all gone in Confederate bonds and many of the students were poor. Mills says:

"Some young men who had gone into the Confederate Army when mere boys, came to the College and asked to be allowed to give their notes for tuition. They had scarcely any money. I am proud to say that this privilege of giving notes for their tuition was never refused any young man of good character, and that not one of the Confederate boys ever failed to repay his note—both principal and interest."

For lack of overcoats some of the young men brought their army blankets, which served them as shawls. One of these was John C. Scarborough, who afterwards became State Superintendent of Public Instruction. The story is still told of how he wore his blanket around the campus with the "N. C." showing in the hack. Dr. Wingate had on the faculty another giant in Charles E. Taylor, who came in 1870. In 1878 came a youthful squire, later to give a good account of himself, William Louis Poteat.

HONOR SOCIETY

THE Golden Bough is the supreme honor society of Wake Forest College. The membership of the organization is composed of those men in college who have attained distinction, and who are considered most outstanding in scholarship, efficient leadership, and Christian character. The annual election of new members comes in the spring, at which time each member of the college faculty and each member of the Golden Bough submits a list of ten men, who, in his opinion, all things considered, give greatest promise. Those who receive the highest number of votes by this process are selected to fill the available places in the organization. The total membership can never exceed twenty-five, according to the constitution.

After the election each spring the public tapping ceremony is held, at which time the new members are officially recognized and congratulated.

As the Golden Bough in ancient mythology represented the life of the oak, so the honor society represents the life and ideals of Wake Forest College. As the mistletoe, hanging yonder on the uppermost branches of the huge oaks on the Wake Forest campus, seems to preserve the existence of the silent tree in winter, when the tree itself appears dead, so the Golden Bough Honor Society embodies the soul of the college and preserves the existence of her sacred principles. Membership in the Golden Bough is considered the highest individual honor which can be bestowed upon a student at Wake Forest.

The 1928 Howler

W. C. WHITLEY
Editor-in-Chief

If one is to be a successful Editor of a college Annual he must be seasoned in the lore of Art, steeped in psychology and philosophy, and endowed with a ready ability to apply them to life on the campus. Then he must transfer life as it is to the pages of a book—what Dickens did in prose the editor must do in pictures. If the graying man is carried back to his youth by his college Annual, the Annual has fulfilled its mission. Whitley is a man like this. His intimate knowledge of the Campus and its activities amply qualifies him for his work. That's why we chose him as Custodian of our College Life—scribe and painter of those things which we wish to remember.

In Sullivan we find the making of a capitalist. His nomination for Business Manager of The Howler was largely due to his native appearance as a calm, calculating, sophisticated, and energetic executive. He has a romantic attachment for Raleigh, and while waiting for the afternoon to wear away in the capital city, he rubs elbows with the business men of the place. If he puts his wares it is due in no small measure to his insatiable desire to be of service.

ELMER CLOER
Editor-in-Chief

"G. W." or "Joyner," as he is called by his many friends, comes to us from "Old Virginia"—and we may truly say of him that he is a worthy son of so aristocratic a State. Joyner is thoroughly a gentleman, clean, sportsman-like and sincere, possessing a personality that readily wins him friends, and honesty and sincerity that retain for him the friendship of all.

He possesses all the traits of a good Business Manager. His courtesy and never-tiring efforts to please have made him a very popular man, and through his diligent guidance Old Gold and Black has felt the guiding hand of a competent Business Manager.

The Student

H. J. OVERMAN
Editor-in-Chief

A man, to be a successful pilot of a literary publication, must possess a Whitmanic individualism; a penetrating weather-eye that can, in the selection of material for his magazine, perceive and avoid the sand-banks of dullness and insipidity and the muddy waters of mediocrity; a personality that can fuse into a publication a vibrant and commanding strength, and a pertinacity that keeps the publication in the channels of progressiveness. Overman has measured up to the qualifications as Editor of The Student, and the magazine has commanded wide-spread approval and commendation during the year. Throughout the last two years he has contributed a high-grade of material to the magazine, and his work marks him as a promising man.

When Upchurch was nominated for Business Manager of The Student the Campus took it for granted that he was the only man for the job. He is one of those favored men whom we accept without question; one who naturally fits into the scheme of things. His greatest qualification, probably, is his ability to work with those of the Staff. Active, ambitious, courteous, and systematic, he has made a good executive, and has one of the most formidable collections of letter-heads to be found on the campus.

"F" B. Y. P. U.—Star Union

For the past four years "F" B. Y. P. U. has been the outstanding union on the hill. And for the last two years it has won the college efficiency banner. This banner is awarded monthly and "F" has received it each month.

With a grade of 98 per cent for the year, "F" received at the convention the banner for the best individual union in the State. "F" reported in the convention over 1,800 acts of service last year in the name of its B. Y. P. U.

The acts of service were composed largely of extension programs, new unions organized, study courses taught, hospital visits, prepared and unprepared talks made in other B. Y. P. U.'s throughout the State.

This year each union has done excellent work. Below is listed the average of each union for the first and second quarter of the school year:

	First Quarter		Second Quarter
A	86.64%	A	96.87%
B	72.45%	B	90.91%
C	93.11%	C	92.59%
D	92.63%	D	92.42%
E	97.62%	E	96.92%
F	99.04%	F	98.27%
G	95.11%	G	91.6%
H	97.77%	H	95.04%

Who's Who and Why

"Say, lady, can't you read that sign?"
 "Yeah, but I can't swim."

—Notre Dame Juggler.

Hambone: Wake up, Rastus! Wake up!

Rastus: I can't.

Hambone: Why?

Rastus: Because I ain't sleep.

"What's the matter with you?"

"Eyes tired."

"Such terrible grammar! You should say, 'I am tired.'"

—Texas Ranger.

Him: And why do you call me Pilgrim?

Her: Well, every time you call you make a little progress.

—V. M. I. Sniper.

"What mistake did you make in your theme?"

"I thought skirts should be abbreviated."

—Ollapod.

A couple of Scotchmen made a bet to see who could stay under the water longest. Each put up fifty cents. The undertaker recovered the bodies the next day.

"Can you trust your wife alone?"

"Yes, alone."

—Dartmouth Jack o' Lantern.

The price of whiskey keeps going up, but whiskey keeps going down.

She: I thought you said you were going out for a second.

He: Sure—I just had it.

—Yale Record.

"Jever notice that the hottest girls dress the coolest?"

—Oregon Orange Owl.

Farmer: Where did you learn to smoke cigarettes?

Flapper: In Paris.

Farmer: It's a good thing you didn't go to Norway. I hear they smoke herrings up there.

Tourist: We must be getting South—we're hitting more colored people.

—Judge.

"My girl is dumb about the neck up and not so good from the neck down, but—oh, boy, that neck!"

—Johns Hopkins Black and Blue Jay.

Co-Ed: Are you serious, George?

Daniels: No, dear, Armenian.

Student: You say you don't feel well? I'll bet you've got acute indigestion!

Co-ed: Aw-w G'wan! I'll betche you say that to all the girls.

—Judge.

He: We have an All-American player on our team.

She: Only one? It's terrible the way the foreigners overrun this country.

"I hear Mr. Jones left everything he had to the orphans' home."

"Is that so? What did he leave?"

"Twelve children."

"Well, I swan," said the fancy diver, jumping off the board.

—Illinois Siren.

"Cutting class, eh?"

"Yes, illegal holiday."

—Notre Dame Juggler.

Rural Autoist: I want some tires.
 Salesman: Ballon tires?
 Rural Autoist: Naw, automobile tires.
 —Orange Peel.

My parents told me not to smoke,
I don't.
 Nor listen to a naughty joke,
I don't.
 They made it clear I musn't wink
 At pretty girls, or even think
 About intoxicating drink,
I don't.

To flirt or dance is very wrong
I don't.
 Wild youth chase women, wine and song,
I don't.
 I kiss no girls, not even one,
 I do not know how it is done,
 You wouldn't think I had much fun,
I don't.

Judge: What is the charge, officer?
 Officer: Driving while in a state of extreme infatuation.

—Princeton Tiger.

He: Where do you live?
 She: In the nineteenth block.
 He: I always like to know how far I can go with a girl.

—Magnum.

"Would you take a chance on the modern liquor?"

"Sure, how much is a chance?"

—Wabash Caveman.

She was only a photographer's daughter, but she was well developed.

—Yale Record.

THE PERFECT GIRL.

Height: 5 ft. 5 in.

Weight: 115 lbs.

Hair: Chestnut.

Eyes: Blue.

Age: 19 years.

Car: 7 in.

Waist: 20 in.

Chest: 36 in.

Neck: "Yes."

"Let me hold your palmolive?"

"Not on your lifebuoy."

"Guess I'm out of lux."

A traffic light
 Means "Stop" when red—
 But lips that are
 Mean "Go ahead!"

"You're all the world to me."
 "Don't you like the world all around you?"

—Illinois Siren.

May Your Sheep Skin Prove a Magic Carpet

You pass from college days armed with a diploma—and a determination to make your mark. Will that sheep skin prove a magic carpet, transporting you to your cherished goal? We hope it will.

Much depends upon your selection of a life vocation. Investigate the possibilities open to you if you become a "life insurance pilot."

"ELECTRIC POWER!— A CONSUMER-OWNED INDUSTRY"

SAYS HALEY FISKE.

President Metropolitan Life Insurance Company

Since Mr. Fiske's statement was made, the number of investors in electric power companies has grown to over three million.

It is estimated that during 1926, nearly four hundred thousand customers bought over three million shares in the electric power companies serving them. All told, over thirteen and a half million shares of stock have been purchased by the customers of these companies. These owners are found in every walk of life. Two companies alone report nearly fourteen thousand customer stockholders, representing 269 separate occupations.

The movement toward customer ownership of industry finds its largest expression in the electric power companies because of the high sense of responsibility developed by these companies in their dealings with the public.

Operated under the American principle of individual initiative, and directed by a personnel of tested integrity and public-mindedness, these companies have so definitely identified themselves with the interest of the public, that the structure of America's prosperity and progress rests to a large degree upon their service.

America's unequalled level of comfort and prosperity, made possible through cheap, abundant power, developed under the American principle of individual initiative, is the best of reasons why that principle should be preserved and perpetuated.

AFTER COLLEGE, WHAT?

The Seminary welcomes college trained men and women who plan to crown their education with specialties in the religious field.

SPECIALTIES

Special courses offered embrace preaching, teaching, and singing. Scholarship and evangelism have set apart the "Southwestern" men and women. The spirit on the campus is 100 per cent in cordiality and fellowship. Men and women are trained in 10 distinct lines of religious educational work, and gospel singers are prepared for every phase of activity in the music field. Women along with men are given their specialty.

EXPENSES

Expenses are kept at the minimum with no tuition and low rents and board. Special homes are offered to married students and hundreds make their way through school preaching, directing educational activities, and singing. Two and three years are required for the completion of the various courses and the outlay is negligible as compared with the increased efficiency in service.

CLIMATE

The great open spaces of the Southwest offer splendid health conditions. The majesty of the plains is unparalleled, and the beauty and accessibility of the Seminary is everything to be desired. COME, JOIN WITH US

BUILDERS DREAMS

VISIONS created by the imagination precede the achievement of any really great accomplishment. The ability to weave the threads of imagination into the finished fabric is equally important.

It has been the privilege of the EDWARDS & Broughton Company to interpret the ideas of the Staff and create in material form their vision.

From the art work and engravings to the finished book, this volume is the result of organized cooperation with the Staff.

Such able cooperation is one of the "visions" which precede the building of a successful business, and is a part of the working policy of the EDWARDS & Broughton Company.

To those Staffs desiring complete cooperation from art work and engravings to the finished book, we offer unexcelled service. Complete service means undivided responsibility as to the result—one organization to correspond and talk with—one trained director to merge the many ingredients into the finished product.

You, too, may be proud of your annual.
